NO PROGRESS IN DRY ENFORCEMENT

NEW YORK, July 8.—Prohibition enforcement might as well take its summer vacation as far as progress against bootleggers and rum runners in this section of the country is concerned, Emory Buckner, U. S. attorney, told Rotarians at a banquet here.

The federal courts, Buckner said, are so congested with thousands of cases that vigorous enforcement becomes impossible.

THE required course of study in the California elementary schools has been cut to twelve subjects, plus three more which local boards may add of their own selection. And here are the twelve: reading, writing, spelling, language, geography, arithmetic, history, civics, music, art, science, and physical education. The history is limited to the United States and California, and the civics includes the constitution of the United States. The hygiene is "training for healthful living."

HEARING HELD IN ASSESSMENT RATE SKIRMISH

Denied an injunction by the courts in its efforts to lower the assessment and taxes upon several Orange county leases, the Petroleum Midway Oil company today carried its fight before the county board of equalization.

The supervisors, sitting as an equalization board, gave the oil company a hearing at 10 a. m. the entire day being devoted to an investigation of the case.

County Assessor James Sleeper, called as a witness by the oil company, was examined throughout the morning session with reference to his methods of fixing assessed valuation and computing the personal property taxes that he levied upon the company's leases.

Leading officials of the oil company were at the hearing, Attorney O'Brien, of Mortgage, Stanley and O'Brien, Los Angeles law firm, appearing as counsel for the company. District Attorney A. P. Nelson represented the county in defense of Sleeper's assessment.

The taxes collected by Sleeper amounted to $38,397.44 upon the seven leases in question, two of which are at Yorba Linda and five at Huntington Beach. The leases aggregate about 158 acres.

In its protest, the oil company estimated $21,492.29 as a proper amount to tax its leases. It attempted to secure an injunction to prevent Sleeper from collecting the taxes, but the superior court denied its petition.

A., and prominent church and social welfare worker, which occurred this morning at 1:30 in the Santa Ana Valley hospital.

Death came as a result of a case of malignant intestinal trouble, developing into gangrene. Mrs. McDill was operated upon yesterday afternoon, but the efforts of attending physicians were of no avail.

Mrs. McDill was taken ill Saturday morning. At first, it was thought that she suffered from a case of indigestion, or had eaten something that did not agree with her.

Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock Friday morning in Winbigler's Mission Funeral home, following which interment will be made in Forest Lawn cemetery, Glendale. Dr. Perry F. Schrock, pastor of the First Congregational church, will officiate.

She was educated in Elkhart, Ind. After finishing high school there, she took up musical studies in the Oberlin conservatory, Ohio. She was an accomplished musician, and during her residence here she assisted in a number of musical events.

The McDills arrived here January 1, 1924, from Long Beach, where Mr. McDill had been connected with the Y. M. C. A.

POLITICAL CLASS TO BE CONDUCTED

CHICAGO, July 8.—The Institute of Politics, a school for the study of the political, economic and social life in the Far East, has opened at the University of Chicago and will continue until July 13.

Japan and China will be subjected to the closest scrutiny, and three of the foremost savants of the Oriental countries will deliver lectures at the institute.

The regular political science staff at the University of Chicago will augment the lectures with courses in the geography of the countries discussed, in the political background of the nations, and in the history of their social conditions.

Eastern Scholars
The eastern scholars who will head the list of speakers will include Count Michimasa Soyeshima, member of the House of Peers, of Japan, and a graduate of Cambridge university; President P. W. Kuo, of Southeastern University of China, Nanking, China, one of the best known Chinese educators, and H. G. W. Woodward, C. B. R., editor of the Tsien-tien Times and the Chinese Yearbook. Dr. Woodward is an English scholar who has resided for 20 years in China, and is said to be the leading authority on China's political problems.

Lectures are to be held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons. In the mornings, and preceding the lectures, University of Chicago instructors will lead round-table discussion groups, in which the points brought out by the authorities will be threshed over. Light will be thrown on obscure and misunderstood facts which have been brought out. The roundtables are intended to crystallize and summarize the points brought out in the experts' talks.

Summer Course
The institute will form a portion of the university's regular summer school session, and will be under the direction of Prof. Quincy Wright of the department of political science.

It is anticipated, however, that students of politics and the Far East from all parts of the United States will flock to the lectures by the learned Far Eastern pedants.

"I expect to work in the future as I have in the past, for those things in government that I believe to be right and I will support them regardless of whether they originate with Democrats, Republicans, Progressives or men bearing any party label," Norris stated in a letter to the Progressive Political league, of New York, made public by his office here.

SUBMITS NEW CONTRACTS TO MEMBERSHIP OF SANTA ANA WALNUT ASSOCIATION

Following ratification by the Santa Ana Walnut Growers association of a new agreement between the local association and the California Walnut Growers association, of Los Angeles, and adoption of a new form of contract between grower members and the local association, J. E. Gowen, secretary of the local organization, is today submitting the new contract to members of the local association, as well as to prospective new members, for their signatures.

Since the new membership agreement was approved by the board of directors of the Santa Ana Walnut Growers association, a considerable number of the leading growers in this district have signed the new contract, and it is expected that all of them will do so at the first opportunity. It is necessary to have all contracts signed before August 1.

According to Secretary Gowen, of the local association, "the new growers agreement and contract is regarded by outstanding figures in the cooperative marketing movement in this state as an important milestone in the progress of a system which, in the opinion of national experts, has alone enabled California farmers to obtain a fair return for their crops over a long period of years."

Modern Marketing Methods.
Through the new arrangement, into which are incorporated the best ideas of some of the outstanding figures in the cooperative marketing movement, the walnut growers will be given the benefit of the newest thought and most modern practice in packing and marketing their crops.

The former growers contracts, which were long in use, grew old and out of date. They were not uniform among the various locals throughout the state, and were in many instances a real hindrance both to the local and the central organization. Under the new membership policy which has just been adopted, the contracts between grower and local and between local and central are absolutely uniform and they place everything and everybody upon an equal footing so far as association affairs are concerned.

"The new membership policy," said Mr. Gowen, was adopted primarily for the benefit of the local association growers. It assures the grower of better results through more uniform business methods. Grower members to whom the new contract and agreement has already been submitted have signed without hesitancy, and those who have read it are decidedly enthusiastic over it. The opinion seems quite general that other cooperative marketing organizations will shortly find it advisable to adopt some such policy, because it is a decidedly progressive step in a thoroughly established system, which is in general favor with California ranchers and fruit growers."

Outsiders May Join.
Under this system, owners of groves just coming into bearing, or legitimate new purchasers of groves, may join local associations, and newly organized locals may join the central association each year between January 1 and August 1.

A local or a grower member may legally withdraw from the organization any year between January 1 and March 1, but after doing so cannot again be admitted to membership until two years have elapsed. If a grower member or a local association breaks the contract unlawfully, he or it cannot again be admitted to membership until three years have elapsed. Growers who do not join locals and locals which do not join the central association before August 1, this year, will not have another opportunity to do so until Jan. 1, 1927.

PRIVATE AIR MAIL PROPOSED BY FORD

LOS ANGELES, July 8.—Henry Ford has laid before Southern California capitalists an offer to join him in a gigantic air mail enterprise, according to reports today in local financial circles.

According to well informed sources, the auto manufacturer has proposed to spend $10,000,000 in establishing a network of private air mail lines, including transcontinental service, and has invited bankers and business men in this section to contribute additional funds and join him in the project.

It is Ford's intent, according to the reports, to obtain exclusive contracts from the government for the delivery of air mail. Ford, it is known, believes that mail can be carried with a profit at existing rates.

Hundreds of planes would be purchased at the outset, and terminals established in leading cities throughout the country. Los Angeles would have direct air mail connections with Chicago and New York.

The Detroit manufacturer has made similar offers to men of wealth in other sections of the country, it was said, through his various local representatives.

GARDEN GROVE MYSTERY FIRE BEING PROBED

Dan Adams, deputy sheriff, today was investigating the cause of a mystery fire, discovered early yesterday morning in the residence of George Tournat, northwest of Garden Grove.

According to statements made by Tournat to Charles McNaught, secretary and manager of the Orange County Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance company, fire was discovered in the room of a domestic when a son of the owner went to the room to call the woman. The woman was missing.

The bed was on fire, as was bedding that was piled on the floor. The loss is estimated at $100, and is covered by a policy carried with the mutual insurance company.

Court Notes

Non-Support Charged
Non-support was charged today in a divorce action filed in superior court by Pearl M. Jensen, of Fullerton, against Carl E. Jensen. The couple married in Santa Ana September 22, 1915 and separated November 1, 1924.

Mrs. Jensen, represented by Attorneys Allen and Lyon, asks custody of their daughter, 8, and division of the community property at Fullerton.

Divorce Asked
His wife's asserted habit of going with other men and entertaining them at her home during her husband's absence was assigned as extreme cruelty in a divorce suit filed in superior court today by Ray O. King, of Anaheim, against Della B. King.

Married at Great Falls, Montana, in 1919, they separated last March 2. King names two men, "Spencer" and "Witherall," as companions of his wife.

A. L. Larsen, Anaheim attorney, represents the plaintiff.

Oil Suit Filed
An action to partition eight oil lots at Huntington Beach was on file today in superior court, Arthur W. Korth and Isabelle H. Taylor appearing as plaintiffs against Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Elliott, who are the other owners.

R. H. Bailey, C. A. Dowell and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Howe, who are alleged to have purchased an interest in oil rights from the Elliotts were joined as defendants. Attorneys Charles D. Swann and Roland Thompson represent the plaintiffs.

Charges Desertion
William L. Maddison drove his wife from home with curses and then deserted her, according to the divorce complaint filed in superior court today by the wife, Grace Maddison.

Attorney Carl M. Heim represents Mrs. Maddison, who charges desertion, non-support and cruelty. The Maddisons were married in Deadwood, South Dakota, in 1914, and separated in Los Angeles in 1922. Mrs. Maddison asks custody of a son, aged 7.

STORES SPRING UP AMID QUAKE RUINS

SANTA BARBARA, July 8.—
"Business as usual" was the sign flung across Santa Barbara's State street today, as the quake-ruined thoroughfare was thrown open to traffic for the first time in 10 days.
Barren of its former beauty, its Spanish structures leveled by quakes and wrecking crews, there was, nevertheless, a thriving business.

Merchants erected tents or impromptu wooden shacks on their store sites, and dispensed goods salvaged from the ruins. It was warm and sultry and soda fountains were popular with residents and tourists. Pretty feminine soda-jerkers in white middie blouses and sailor hats dispensed the liquid refreshments. Around their hats were banners which said "It ain't gonna shake no more."

Marines still patrolled the quake zone. Occasional mild tremors shook the city. The shakes, however, are less frequent and severe,
and no longer cause excitement.

Lively Group Arranges Dana Point Outing And Steak-bake

When Miss Teresa McDonour of 711 South Birch street, takes her departure next Sunday for a month's tour of the east and to visit with relatives, her ticket will not be confined to the one to Grand Rapids, Mich., her most easterly point, but will read "To Happiness" also for the girls of her department at the Register, saw to that in a merry party arranged to honor her last night at Dana Point.

At the close of a busy day in the business department of the newspaper, the two chief conspirators in the plot, Miss Helena
Lieberman and Mrs. Edna Wurster
Herrick, spirited Miss McDonour from her books, and accompanied by the other members of the little group and a generous hamper of picnic fare, motored to Dana Point where a steak supper was enjoyed.

Mrs. Herrick and Miss Louise
Elliott were in charge of broiling the steaks and proved the most capable of chefs. Salad and vegetables, olives, pickles and rolls were served with the toothsome steaks for whose broiling the entire party gathered driftwood.
Coffee and watermelon formed the final delicious course.

The little group was composed of the honor guest, Miss McDonour,
Miss Myrtle Begerow, Miss Louise
Elliott, Mrs. Edna Herrick, Mrs.
Ceely Drake and Miss Helena
Lieberman. As they chatted around the camp fire, they presented Miss McDonour with a handsome leather writing portfolio for use on her trip, accompanied by the clever card of good wishes, in the form of a long railroad ticket "To Happiness."
Miss McDonour will visit her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John McDonour and other relatives in the vicinity of Grand Rapids.

street, for the benefit of the

All members and friends of the congregation and all friends of

Baroness Falls To Death From Seventh Floor

NEW YORK, July 8.—Seeking relief from the oppressive heat early today, Baroness Helen Zur Muehlen, of Java, fell from a seventh-story window of the Ritz-Carlton hotel, and was instantly killed.

The baroness, who was formerly Helen Carruthers, of San Antonio, Tex., had entertained guests at a dinner and dance.

Excusing herself and complaining of the heat, the former Miss Carruthers went into her bedroom, which overlooked the Japanese gardens.

A moment later her guests heard a crash as the girl's body struck on the roof of the two-story garden extension.

Baroness Zur Muehlen was to have sailed for England on the Berengaria today. Her husband is in the Dutch diplomatic service in Java, and she was to have rejoined him.

Concert Season Opens Most Auspiciously At Hollywood Bowl

Santa Ana music lovers helped swell the crowds at last night's opening of the summer concert season at Hollywood Bowl where Fritz Reiner, guest conductor directed a marvelously beautiful program opening with the prelude from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

Other numbers given were "Don Juan" by Strauss, Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody and, following intermission, the Tchaikowsky
Symphony No. 5, E minor.

The Thursday night concert will offer the Berlioz Overture, "Roman Carnival," a Stravinsky suite, "Petrouschka" and "Finlandia" by Sibelius. After intermission, the Beethoven Symphony
No. 3, "Eroica" will be played.

Friday's program will offer a Wolf-Ferrari Overture, "The Secret of Susanne," Weber-Weinner, "Invitation to the Dance," Tchaikowsky, Miniature March from Suite No. 1; Chabrier, "Espana."

Intermission will be followed by Edgar Stillman Kelley, "The Pit and the Pendulum," composer conducting, and Liszt's "Les Preludes."

Strauss and Richard Strauss evening and will offer "Death and Transfiguration" and "Till Eul-enspiegel's Merry Pranks," R.

Johann Strauss.

Next week the famous Hungarian guest-director will yield the honor to Sir Henry Wood, director of the London Symphony orchestra, who comes to California direct from Queen's Hall, London. One of his most noted achievements will be the presentation of "The Planets," Mercury, Saturn and Jupiter, by Gustave Holst which will seem especially fitting and beautiful under the bright galaxy of California's summer stars.

Concerts will continue every Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday night during the season.

BUSINESS LIFE DEPENDS ON FARM INCOME, WALNUT MANAGER TELLS ROTARIANS

CARLYLE THORPE

That the business life of nearly every community in Southern California is dependent upon the farmers' income and that the farmers' prosperity is dependent upon cooperative marketing, were points emphasized in a clear-cut address given yesterday by Carlyle Thorpe, Los Angeles, general manager of the California Walnut Growers association, before the Santa Ana Rotary club.

"The Effect of Cooperative Marketing on a Business Community," was the subject of Thorpe's address, in which he outlined the reasons why business men of California should give their hearty support to the associations.

Rowland is Chairman
Fred C. Rowland, a director of the Santa Ana Walnut Growers association, was program chairman, with other members of the committee being B. W. Crawford, Tustin, manager of the Tustin Hills Citrus association, W. C. Jerome, bean grower, and C. D. Brown, lemon grower.

"The farmer's dollar," said Thorpe, "is worth several times more to a community than is the dollar of the ordinary business house. All of his dollar is brought in from the outside. The farmer really makes the success of nearly every community in California. Study that statement."

"Here in this county you have good soil, good climate and intelligent citizenry, which are essential to successful fruit and nut growing and farming. But with all that, you cannot have successful operations in the orchards and on the farms of this county unless you have profitable marketing."

Cooperative Marketing
Thorpe said that cooperative marketing had done great things for the various farm industries. Using the walnut industry as an illustration, he said:

"Twelve years ago the walnut crop was one-third what it is now, and we talked of over-production. The crop is three times what it was and the price has doubled. Yet the price to the consumer is only 35 per cent greater than it was 12 years ago. The price to the consumer of all other foodstuffs is 50 per cent higher and of all other commodities 60 per cent higher."

"What has done this? Successful cooperative marketing."

Thorpe, using the walnut as illustrative of citrus fruits and beans, brought out these points as showing what the cooperative organization does:

First—Stabilizes a commodity, so that the American walnut grower now gets more for his product than the foreigner gets for his.

Second—Extends markets. Walnuts used to be sold to markets representing 30,000,000 persons; now to 115,000,000.

Third—Buyers know their buying is stabilized, so that instead of buying by the sack, they buy in large quantities.

Results of Advertising
Fourth—By advertising, consumers are urged to change their habits of eating; that is, to increase their consumption of the California product.

Fifth—Supplies are bought in bulk and distributed at cost.

Sixth—Trade conditions everywhere are studied.

Two excellent musical numbers featured yesterday's Rotary program. First came a piano solo, by Maurice Zam, a guest of C. A. Gustlin. Zam is one of America's best known and most accomplished pianists. Next came a solo by Miss Mildred Ware, Los Angeles, a talented pupil of Ellis Rhodes.

OPIUM EVIL IS DISCUSSED AT PACIFIC MEET

HONOLULU, T. H., July 8.—Chinese efforts to eradicate the opium evil will be futile as long as the theory of extra territorially permits foreign dominion of the drug are being smuggled, Doctor Koo, of China, declared in public session of the Institute of Pacific Relations last night.

The speaker described the opposition of powerful foreign interests against the Chinese National Anti-Opium league, but predicted its growth in the face of the stumbling blocks placed in the way.

C. C. Batchelder explained the British opposition to the American plan, presented at the Geneva Opium congress. He said that while the American idea was based on speed and vigorous action, it was discredited generally throughout the world because of the "conspicuous failure" of the Volstead act and anti-narcotic law enforcement in the United States.

William Allen White, Kansas editor, and Chester Rowell, California, participated in an immigration round table considering educating the public through the newspapers in problems of immigration.

Dr. A. W. Taylor, in an afternoon speech, said American churches generally opposed the blunt method in which Japanese have been excluded from the United States.

Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford university and presiding officer at the conference, lauded it as an "institute based on idealism desiring to seek the solution to points of conflict among Pacific nations."

Claim Corrugated Sides On Vessels Prevents Rolling

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—Ships with corrugated sides to prevent seasickness is the latest wrinkle in the ship world.

According to officials of the Moore shipyards, on San Francisco bay, a corrugated ship has practically no chance to roll because the wrinkles shoulder the waves alongside in a vertical direction, whereas the action in a plain-sided ship is to waste energy by pushing them away horizontally, square to the vessel's side.

The British freighter, Newton Ash, one of the first vessels of this type to be launched, was recently repaired here. It was subjected to examination by hundreds of shipping men.

Increased deadweight of 6 per cent and reduced fuel consumption of 16 per cent is claimed for the wrinkled ships.

Eight of the new type vessels are under construction.

Scabies Quarantine Lifted In Arizona

PHOENIX, Ariz., July 8.—Thousands of Arizona cattle have been released for shipment to market, Gov. G. W. P. Hunt having lifted the scabies quarantine on grazing lands in the Parker and Salt River valley areas.

State Veterinarian S. E. Douglas announced that 11 remaining sections still under quarantine would be released within a few days.

All cattle owners, however, will be required to continue complying with the dipping regulations for preventing scabies.

Exchange Seats Are Not Taxable

NEW YORK, July 8.—The appellate division has affirmed a New York supreme court decision that the value of New York stock exchange seats is not taxable under the law assessing "moneyed capital in competition with national banks." The decision was handed down in a "test suit," brought by Arthur Broderick against a tax commissioner, who assessed Broderick $100,000, the value of his seat on the exchange.

LIFE OF FAIRY AWAITING SOME UNKNOWN CHILD

NEW YORK, July 8.—The mantle of a well known clothing house has descended upon a modern fairy godfather.

An advertisement inserted by Edward W. Browning, son of the founder of Browning, King and company, has opened the gates of fairyland with the wave of a wand that once was a yardstick.

Browning, now many times a millionaire, wants a "pretty, refined girl, about 14 years of age," to be brought up as his own child, a companion for an adopted daughter, Dorothy. The successful applicant from among hundreds who have rushed for opportunity, will have "every opportunity, education, travel, kindness, care and love," according to the advertisement.

It will mean that some poor little girl, sweltering in the heat of an East Side street, will be transported to the top of one of the skyscrapers that now form her horizon, where she will find a luxurious home, a roof garden, a swimming pool, while servants, tutors, social instructors and the caterers to the world of wealth will mobilize at her beck and call.

This has been the experience of Dorothy Browning, adopted by the millionaire six years ago.

"It is surprising how fast they change," said the modern godfather, as he anxiously viewed the host of applicants storming his office. "A few years ago, she had nothing. The other day, when I asked my adopted daughter what kind of an automobile she would like, she chose a Rolls Royce and added some instructions about matching the upholstery."

The millionaire wants a companion for this child.

Little girls, arrayed in Sunday best, were taken in droves to his skyscraper office, fond and anxious parents accompanying them for the most part. Even one boy applied, pleading he could play the violin and amuse Browning and Dorothy and "pay you back when I become an artist."

Browning interviews all applicants and is taking his time about making a selection.

S. A. PACKING HOUSE STARTS OPERATION IN BEAN CANNING

300 Women and 75 Men Employed by Firm; Pay Roll Over $900 Daily

WILL CONTINUE UNTIL DECEMBER

Products of Plant Are Sent Throughout All Parts Of United States

The big cannery plant of the California Packing corporation, on East First street, was under full operation today canning Kentucky Wonder beans, grown locally.

Incidentally, it is announced that the company is giving employment at this time to 300 women and 75 men, and is distributing in wages daily a sum in excess of $900.

According to a statement today by W. H. Nelson, manager, the cannery will be in continuous operation until the latter part of December.

Canning of beans will continue through this month, and will be followed by the canning of chilis, this vegetable being ready about August 1. Pimentos will follow chilis and will be available for canning until the first heavy frost. Opening of the plant has made work available to a large number of women and the influence of the payroll will be felt in business circles throughout the period of operation.

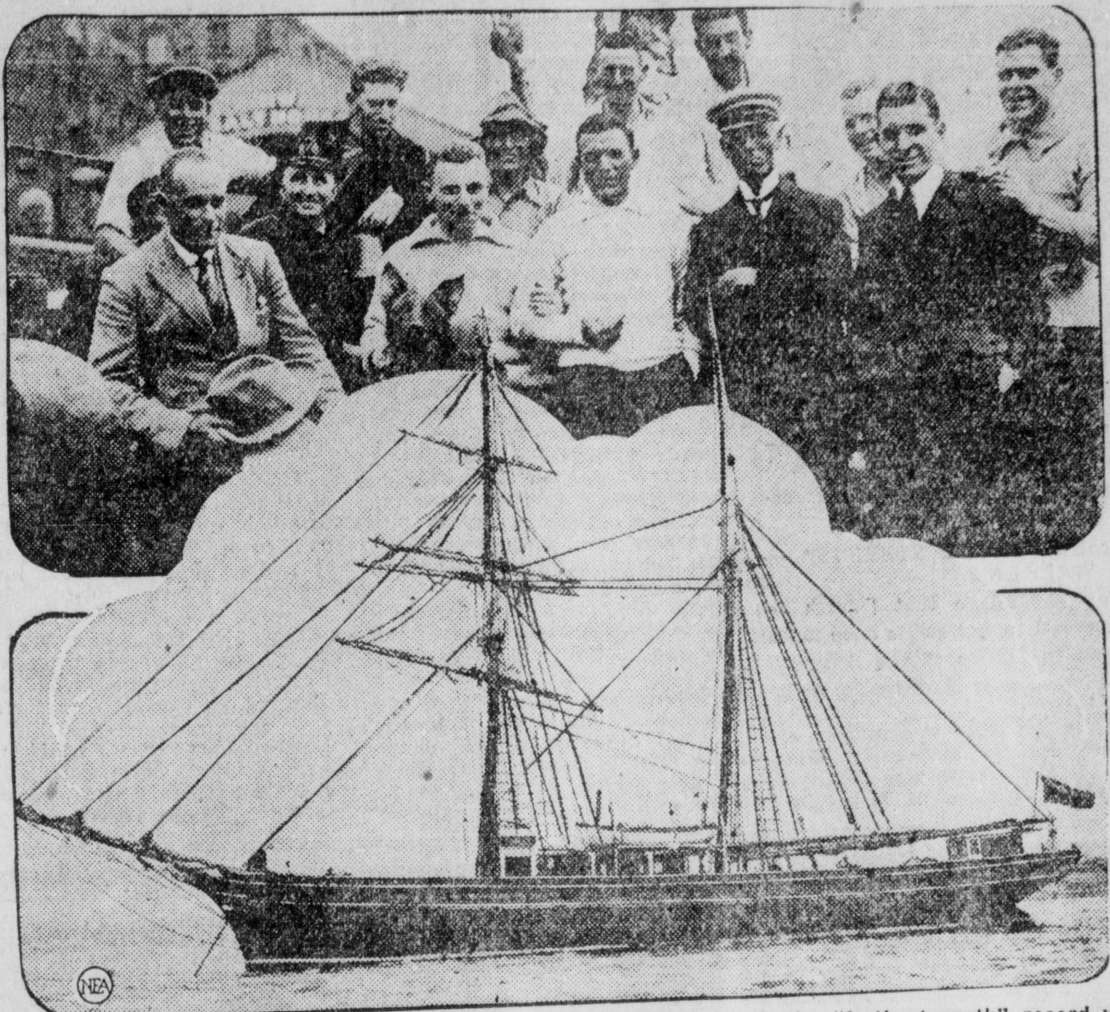

While the company is growing most of the beans it is handling, it is buying some from individual growers and is paying 4 cents a pound. It is said that the crop this year is very good, in both quality and quantity. The average production is around four tons to the acre.

Products of the local plant are distributed by the corporation to all parts of the world.

Clean-up Drive Urged by Women

HUNTINGTON BEACH, July 8.—A city clean-up-week, inaugurated by the women of the town, may result in the near future as a result of repeated complaints from the feminine population of the city. A special committee was appointed by the chamber of commerce to investigate the situation and, if necessary, prepare for a city clean-up-week. Joseph Vavra is chairman of the committee.

ANOTHER EXPEDITION INTO ARCTIC WILL TRY TO BREAK FARTHEST NORTH RECORD

Grettir Algarsson, the well known explorer, will attempt to break the "farthest north" record with a ship. He expects to reach this point and return to Liverpool within six months. NEW LOW WAVE STATIONS ARE MOST POPULAR

Short wave transmission and reception are absorbing the attention of radio amateurs in the vicinity of Santa Ana. New Zealand and Australian stations are being "worked" under the usual summer static conditions with comparative ease, it was reported by a local operator today.

According to the same radio "bug" New Zealand had the news of the recent earthquakes the evening of the day that they occurred. Broadcasting has begun on these lower wave lengths, but none of the smaller stations has introduced it yet. Radio store proprietors state that few attachments have yet been put on the market which will enable low wave reception with the

Revolver Shots Bring Honeymoon To Abrupt Close

SAN DIEGO, July 8.—Two pistol shots ended a week-old honeymoon here.

Villa Franka shot his pretty young bride and then committed suicide, according to the story, as pieced together by police from neighbors' reports.

A woman's voice was heard calling, "Oh, help! Oh, help!" Then a shot.

F. M. Frazier rushed into the apartment where he heard the noise.

There was a second shot as he got there, only to find Franka on the floor, dead, a pistol nearby.

Mrs. Franka was on the bed in the next room, still moaning. Little hope is held for her recovery.

Neighbors said the couple had been married a week.

FEW EXECUTIONS LONDON, July 8.—Only 11 per cent of the death sentences imposed in the British army during the war were carried out, official records show.

PROSPERITY IS REFLECTED BY BANK DEPOSITS

Realizing that both lemon and orange growers will receive gratifying prices for their products, V. D. Johnson, secretary of the Orange Community Chamber of Commerce, has procured from the various banks of Orange figures which confirm the expressed opinion of forward looking men over the county to the effect that this year will wind up better financially than the year 1924.

The banks of Orange show deposits at the close of business Friday, July 3, totaling $3,026,671.66. Deposits on July 3, 1924 were $2,622,513.15. This is a net gain of $404,158.51.

Of the foregoing figures, $1,787,782.56 represents the 1925 deposits in the Commercial bank and $1,238,889.00 in the savings bank and savings departments. The gain in the commercial deposits is $234,255.49, while persons have put into savings an increase of $169,903.02.

The Orange Building and Loan association showed total resources on July 3, 1925, of $1,225,170.41 as against $1,057,013.66 on the corresponding date on 1924, showing a gain of $168,156.75. A large portion of Building and Loan resources represents money placed as savings.

The bank figures show that, despite the frost and wind damage suffered last winter, the community of Orange is better off financially than a year ago. The same doubtless will apply to all parts of the county, it is asserted.

Emphasizing the more prosperous condition of the Orange community over last year, officials of the various banks declared that two months later will show a much greater increase in deposits over the present time, while Osman and Loan association, remarked that the increase for the year is probably greater than in any corresponding 12 months in the history of the organization.

Shipped as Deck Boy and Returns As Quartermaster

PASADENA, Calif., July 8.—Five months ago Hunter S. Kimbrough, youthful author-adventurer, shipped out of San Francisco on the steam freighter, West Jester, as a deck boy, lowest hand on the ship.

Kimbrough has just returned to Pasadena, a quartermaster, after five months of cruising in Oriental waters.

The young writer visited Canton on June 4, when the Chinese rioting broke out, and frightened residents started fleeing from the city.

"The revolution against the white residents in China has increased so much that the foreigners are unable to see the end—the situation is alarming and may lead to very serious international complications," Kimbrough said.

SANTA BARBARA ELDER MILES THANKFUL FOR RETIRES FROM MARINES' AID SHOE COMPANY

In the service that they now are giving the stricken city of Santa Barbara, the U. S. marines, dubbed the "devil dogs" during the war, have added new laurels to their long record of gallant service and distinguished achievements, according to Earl Busby, manager of Hotel Santa Ana, who returned yesterday from the channel city.

Busby, who lived in Santa Barbara before coming here, has considerable property in that city, including two residences. Mrs. Busby and two daughters, Misses Beryl and Dorothy Busby, now are in Santa Barbara.

Speaking of the service given by the marines, the hotel man said that the sea-soldiers certainly are living up to their reputation to be the best disciplined, most effective, and result-getting police force in the world, barring none—not even New York's "finest" and the London "bobbies."

For military purposes, Uncle Sam's marines already have established a fighting reputation second to none in the United States defense forces. "Never before were life and property so well protected as they are today with the marines patrolling the city," Busby remarked, voicing his approval of the manner in which the fighting men are performing their duties.

"Courtesy seems to be the second nature of these men," he added, "and they were going about their work without that gruff, hard-boiled attitude toward citizens that some persons think is indispensable to efficient police work."

"I cannot begin to express the appreciation that the people of Santa Barbara feel for the service given by the marines, and if they had their own way about it, they would never let them go."

Befriended Man: Is Left Estate

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—"My dear friend" will lose $4500 because John Hornridge failed to mention him by name in the will filed for probate here, and Mrs. Verina Salomon, who befriended Ernest Selander, was richer by $4900 from his will, also filed here.

Hornridge, a hotel man, left $5000 to "My Dear Sister," but also failed to mention her name, and the public administrator is looking for her.

Selander gave Mrs. Salomon a sealed envelope in 1914, not to be opened until he died. It contained his will, leaving her his estate.

Sympathy Is Sent By Belgian King

SACRAMENTO, July 8.—Messages of sympathy for victims of the Santa Barbara earthquake continue to arrive at the governor's office here. A message relayed through the state department at Washington from Ambassador Phillips in Belgium, read:

"I have been requested by the king to convey the following message to the people of the stricken district:

"We have spent such happy hours in Santa Barbara, the queen and I, and we feel deeply concerned at the dreadful catastrophe that occurred there."

(Signed) ALBERT.

A note of sympathy also was received from T. Matsudai, Japanese ambassador at Washington.

HELD AS EMBEZZLER TORONTO, Ont., July 8.—Andrew H. Peppal, brought back from Los Angeles to face charges made by the Ontario government concerning bond dealings and theft and embezzlement of $368,000 from the province, appeared in Toronto police court yesterday. His case was continued until July 14.

R. R. Miles has taken over the interests of his father, R. E. Miles, in the Miles Shoe company, 212 West Fourth street, it was learned today. The same policies will be continued.

The Miles, father and son, came to Santa Ana in 1910, from Berkeley. Their first store was located at 122 West Fourth street. After several years at that address, they moved to the present location.

A dissolution sale will start Thursday morning at 8 o'clock, it was announced yesterday.

"After 15 years together in the shoe business, my father has decided to retire," said R. R. Miles today. "The policies of the firm will remain the same and the public is assured of the same courteous treatment and fair dealing that they have been accorded in the past."

"We are deeply appreciative of the patronage of the people of Orange county and wish at this time to thank them. The store will remain at the same location." In the Miles advertisement in yesterday's Register, the address was given as 212 East Fourth. The correct location is 212 West Fourth street.

Betten to Attend Beach Meeting of Credit Bureaus

Measures designed to not only protect credit but also assist in promoting good credit, and lessen the cost of collections, will be discussed at the next meeting of the California Association of Retail Credit Bureaus, to be held Saturday at Long Beach, according to advices received by D. H. Betten, manager of the Orange County Credit bureau, with offices in the First National Bank building.

Santa Ana will be represented by Betten, who will address the meeting on administrative features and business methods of local credit bureaus.

Other matters, including desired legislation, better organization methods, elimination of duplication of work and expense, will come up at the meeting, Betten declared.

Deaf Mute Held In Santa Ana On Burglary Charge

Caught in an unoccupied house on Buaro road, near Ocean avenue, Garden Grove, late yesterday, George Harper, 24, laborer, of that town, is in the county jail facing a charge of burglary in the second degree. Harper is deaf and dumb and is blind in one eye. A woman living in a house nearby noticed Harper pass through an orchard and enter the residence with a pass key, according to H. J. Zabel, fingerprint expert on the sheriff's staff. She notified the caretaker, J. H. Myers, who took the man into custody and turned him over to the authorities.

Motorist Didn't Know His Water

THE DALLES, Ore., July 8.—When a thirsty motorist along the Columbia river highway saw a sign at the foot of a waterfall that said "contaminated water," he filled his cup to the brim and quaffed heartily. C. W. Wanzler, division engineer of the state highway department, happened along and stopped. Before he could caution the tourist, the latter turned to him and said:

"What kind of mineral water is that? I never heard of the name before."

Now a new sign will go up marked:

"Rotten—not fit to drink."

ACTION IS DEFERRED BY SANTA ANA BODY

Speaker Stresses Matter of Co-operative Effort in Service to Community

Creation by Exchange clubs of the state of a revolving fund for assisting members of the club suffering from loss by the Santa Barbara quake was suggested by James Collins, past president of the Long Beach club, in an address to the local club at its meeting at Ketter's cafe yesterday.

The Long Beach man expressed belief that each Exchangeite in the state would be more than glad of the opportunity to assist by contributing $3 to such a fund. Action by the local club was deferred until a later date, pending development.

Collins rectified briefly the active part men of the Santa Barbara club have taken in directing affairs in the city since the earthquake.

City Manager's Assistant George F. Emery, president of the club, he said, was made assistant to the city manager 10 minutes after the destructive quake, and had since been constantly on the job, assisting in city work and neglecting his own personal affairs. He declared that Emery had aged 15 years in the last week, the result of the strain he had been under.

Dr. Oscar Bell, also a member of the Long Beach club, was present and entertained the Exchangeites with an address on the purposes and work of the club.

Emphasizing the point that the Exchange and other clubs have formed for the purpose of service in the communities in which they are located, the speaker stressed the point of cooperative action, and its value to any community.

"No individual has exhausted his capacity when he has done his best, and his capacity is exhausted only when he calls in others to cooperate in whatever he may be undertaking," was a statement of the speaker.

Service For Society "The reason for the great advance of the clubs is that they have stepped into service in behalf of organized society," was another declaration.

Directing attention to the fact that force no longer can be employed in direction of individual or collective effort, and that the period of individual responsibility has passed in favor of cooperative action, Dr. Bell declared that any man or woman, who is wandering around aimlessly with respect to his or her social or community duty, is a parasite on the community.

Paul Mallory, harbor commissioner at Long Beach, accompanied Collins and Dr. Bell here to visit the local club.

Ed Marvie, with the local office of the Remington Typewriter company, entertained the club members with two vocal selections, being accompanied on the piano by Irwin Doyle.

Edward Everett Horton, Esther Ralston and Erwin Connelly in a scene from "A Beggar on Horseback," current attraction at the West End theater.

ESTHER RALSTON STARS IN WEST END FILM

The girl who narrowly escaped becoming a highbrow beginning at the age of seven has given one of the most tender portrayals of sweet, unaffected love since Priscilla Tremulously told John Alden to speak for himself.

Referring, of course, to Esther Ralston, in "Beggar on Horseback."

James Cruze, always unerring in his praise, asserts that Miss Ralston's gentle and unselfish characterization will have a wholesome influence on the whole sisterhood of flappers.

In "Beggar on Horseback," now showing at the West End, this winsome, fair-haired girl of twenty-two is a designer in love with Edward Everett Horton, a struggling young composer, who is driven to write synopses in the stead of sonatas for a livelihood. Needless to say, he returns her love, but there are complications that almost urge him into marriage for money.

Her simplicity, loyalty and glowing unselfishness to the composer in the face of discouragement is wistful and appealing. Her care of him has a fairly material solicitude, even to the extreme of advising him to marry the rich girl so that he may have leisure to create the high type of music to which he yearns.

Throughout the fantastic dream sequence of the production she appears to him at intervals of his distress like a smiling vision—like a benison of hope.

ORPHEUM VAUDEVILLE BILL
CLOSES TONIGHT

On this week's vaudeville bill which closes tonight at Walker's theater, five celebrated Orpheum acts are found, all having found headline spots throughout the various key-centers of the gigantic Orpheum circuit.

The bill includes briefly William Garton and company in their delightful skit titled "Kisses," presenting a powerful dramatic company in a pleasing act of unusual originality and vigor; Del Chain and Lou Archer have been outstanding hits in their offering "Oh I Did Not," which combines a deal of real, high-grade slapstick comedy and other interesting vaudeville abracadabra; Jack Hanley, rightfully termed Prince of Orpheum comedians, has made a good impression at every showing with his odd bits of droll humor and mimicry; the golf wizard, and mimics, the golf wizard, Jack Redmond and company furnishing splendid relief with their novel act which has much of interest to all who enjoy the well-known Scotch pastime, and also to those who don't; and the remaining act which brings old-time headliners into action, namely, The Six Hassons, who whirl, spin and tumble like insane dervishes, closes this exceptional bill of de luxe entertainment.

E. Hamilton, New York's first and famous policewoman. Practically every happening in the picture was culled from some case that has come under investigation of the New York police, and the whole has been deftly welded into a motion picture drama that for strength of story, virility of drama, vividness of characterization and all around interest has seldom been equaled.

There are very few of us in this everyday world that would believe the things told in this story actually happen. It's hard to believe that there are men and women so vile as to conceive plots so cruel, so far-reaching in their evil effects, as are shown in this picture. Yet here they are, before our eyes, their authenticity guaranteed by actual statistics.

"MY WIFE AND I"
OPENS AT YOST

Beware the dangerous calm of married life! Why? Well, the new picture, "My Wife and I," which opened last night at the Yost theater tells the somewhat startling and highly interesting story of what romance does to a happily married couple and their fine, upstanding son.

"My Wife and I" is the title of this absorbing photoplay which makes excellent entertainment because of the different elements that go to make up the story. There is the domestic serenity of a wealthy home on Long Island; the ceaseless round of pleasures that make up the everyday life of an idle New York youth; the gilded superficiality of cafes, gold-diggers and paid-for love.

Irene Rich does some remarkable work in her portrayal of the wife and mother, Mrs. Borden, who finds herself threatened with the loss of her husband, home and happiness. She is unusually beautiful in some of the shots, while Huntly Gordon, who plays the part of Mr. Borden, is as at ways the distinguished, courtly matinee idol of movie fans. He has a very difficult role, but his personality carries him through with flying colors. John Harron, brother of the beloved Bobby Harron of yesterday, shows a remarkable aptitude for the boyish, juvenile lead and will quickly make a name for himself if he continues doing the splendid acting he did in "My Wife and I."

better known commercial sets. A local radio dealer predicts low wave receivers, as separate units, as a very probable addition to the radio stocks of the present.

Marconi was the pioneer in the low wave field. It was related by the amateur. "He and John L. Reinartz, of Connecticut, have done wonders for radio—come over and listen to some of the low wave stations and hear for yourself," he continued. "More static annoys you when you listen to a Los Angeles broadcasting station than when you listen in on the new low wave sets," he declared.

MADISON, Wis., July 8.—A courthouse janitor in a small Wisconsin town developed a novel way to rid the courthouse lawn of dandelion blooms. He picked up a golf club and practiced his golf by nipping off the yellow flowers. Soon all the golfers in town had cut off all the blooms, in addition to digging up considerable turf.

BOBBED HAIR NOT SIN, SAYS C. E. FOUNDER

PORTLAND, Ore., July 8.—"Short skirts and bobbed hair aren't wicked, but it would be better if girls wore both longer," Mrs. Francis E. Clark, wife of the founder of the Christian Endeavor society, paused in her activities at the international convention here to comment thus on modern flapper ideas.

"Young people are inclined to be frivolous, but they are not lowering the moral tone. They act as they do because it is the fashion," she said.

She has a perspective on all these younger generation follies brought down from the days when grandmother was a girl. She was born 74 years ago, and she has seen many fads and fancies come and go.

"When they ask me for advice, I tell the girls, 'It would suit me better if you would let down your skirts and allow your hair to grow,' but mostly they don't ask me, because I'm old fashioned," Mrs. Clark said.

But she is not discouraged or apprehensive at all over the girls of today. "The frivolous ones will get better as they grow older," she believes.

Universal peace should be sought through the agency of a world court, resolutions adopted by the convention urged.

As the resolutions passed unanimously, a wave of applause swept through the assembly.

"We ask congress to support

Escapes Jail With Only Day to Serve

VENICE, Calif., July 8.—Stanley A. Merrill, 27, had but one more day to serve of a 10-day term in the Venice jail, but he couldn't wait for his official release.

The youth is being sought by officers today on a charge of jail-breaking. He broke the bars of his cell with a wrench and sprung the lock on the iron door.

Police said Merrill realized that El Segundo officers were waiting for him outside the jail yard, and that this probably accounted for his anxiety to get away prematurely.

every effort that promises to bring about international limitation of armaments, or that will create a spirit of friendliness among the nations of the earth," one resolution declared.

Another urged the establishment of "a world court of international justice, based on international law, to the end that there may be provided a tribunal to which international disputes may be referred and settled on a basis of law and justice."

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, of New York, took the helm of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, relinquished to him by Dr. Francis E. Clark, founder and president of the society for 38 years.

BUSINESS STRUCTURES BURN
KENNETT, Calif., July 8.—Four frame business buildings burned here this morning, with a loss of $15,000. The only insurance carried on any of the structures was cancelled a month ago. Origin of the fire is unknown.

COOLIDGE SEES FLEET MOVE ON BOOZE RUNNERS

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., July 8.—From the lawn of White Court, summer residence of President Coolidge, members of the presidential party yesterday watched coast guard destroyers and chasers moving to battle against a rum fleet hovering off the rockbound coast.

Far out to sea could be seen the boats of the dry navy, cruising between the rum ships and their objective, which was rumored to be the landing of liquor at or near the Summer White House.

Local authorities, who recently raided a $30,000 bootleg cache in a large unoccupied house, separated only by a driveway from the rose gardens of White Court, say the rum runners would consider they had scored a great victory if they could land liquor near Mr. Coolidge's summer home.

This portion of the Massachusetts coast was formerly much favored by smugglers, because of the numerous bays and inlets, but it had been mopped up pretty thoroughly just before the president's arrival.

Coast guard officials refused to admit there had been any unusual activity likely, but from the grounds of White Court one could see the destroyers and chasers on the in-shore patrol.

Only a few days before the president arrived here, a large cargo of liquor was landed in the rock-bound bathing pool, where Mrs. Coolidge went swimming Monday. Most of this supply was rushed to manufacturing towns in eastern Massachusetts.

Girl Disciples Of Nicotine Are Cause of Concern

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—War on cigaret smoking by girls has been declared by delegates attending the biennial convention of the Catholic Daughters of America here.

"There is too much drinking and smoking among young girls," said Miss Mary C. Duffy, supreme regent of the order. "It is one of the outstanding problems of the day. We must do what we can to curb the growing smoking habit among women."

Mrs. Louis Poth, Texas representative, held lack of proper home training was responsible for the habits of youth today.

"The parents are to blame, rather than the young people," she said.

"Smoking among young girls is becoming serious," declared Miss Katherine M. Rosney, national secretary.

Accused Youths Held for Trial

SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—Bliss Y. Baker and Russell Crawford, "perfect crime" exponents, are being held for trial in police court here, on a charge of attempting to extort $50,000 from D. C. Jackling, wealthy copper man. Crawford, the reported "master mind" of the plot, and Baker, a University of California honor student, pleaded not guilty to the attempted extortion, which was detailed as a "fake" kidnapping aimed at Mrs. Jackling.

POWER, MACHINERY ASSIST FARMERS

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 8.—As a result of the increased use of power and labor-saving machinery in farming operations and the opening of new lands well suited to the use of machinery, the average agricultural worker in the United States is now able to care for almost three times as many acres of crops as an individual could handle 75 years ago, according to a study recently made by the division of agricultural engineering, U. S. department of agriculture.

At the same time, the hours of labor on the farm have been reduced and farmers have been relieved of much of the monotony and drudgery which formerly characterized their work.

Power and labor together account for approximately 60 per cent of the total cost of farming and a better knowledge of the power requirements of farm operations and the adoption of more efficient types of power units will do much to cut down production costs, the department says.

The primary horsepower available for use on farms is greater than that used in mining and manufacturing, and is second only to that required for railroads, it is said. The total power used annually on farms amounts to nearly 16,000,000,000 horsepower-hours and the annual cost amounts to a total of nearly $3,000,000,000.

MUSIC TEACHERS MEET
SAN FRANCISCO, July 8.—The Music Teachers' Association of California, in convention here, turned its attention today to radio, with addresses by electric engineers and broadcasting experts. Music in the schools was another topic of the day.

Man Who Killed Mother-in-Law Is Sentenced to Pen

SAN RAFAEL, July 8.—Alvin Alexson, 47, San Francisco draughtsman, was sentenced in superior court here to from one to 10 years in San Quentin prison for the slaying of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Caroline Goetz Axelson, pleaded guilty, with consent of the prosecution, to a charge of manslaughter.

New High Mark In Yosemite Travel

YOSEMITE, Calif., July 8.—Yosemite valley's popularity reached a new height July 4, figures disclosed today. The population of the valley on that date was 11,639. The previous high mark was 10,000. The valley has had 81,303 visitors so far this year, a gain of 6590 over the last year's figure. Automobiles driven into the valley gained 6539 over last year's total.

Drytown Is Not Dry Any Longer

DRYTOWN, Calif., July 8.—Drytown is the name of this town but it doesn't mean anything. At least this is the opinion of Sheriff George Lucot, who raided the home of George Calandri and confiscated 25 gallons of moonshine and 150 gallons of wine.

PITTSBURGH LOOKS LIKE N. L. CHAMPIONS

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

For some reason it had been the opinion of major league managers that a player of the fiery, aggressive type was the only one fitted to lead a team to success.

When George Sisler was appointed manager of the St. Louis Browns, it was said that he was too quiet and backward to become a successful manager.

When Ty Cobb was appointed to lead the Detroit Tigers the fear was expressed—and it was shown to have been well founded on several occasions—that Cobb was too fiery and that he would expect his players to do just as well as he did.

Cobb, theoretically, was the ideal type of a field leader, a brilliant individual, a hard player, a vigorous fighter. But Cobb did not turn out to be a highly successful manager. It is true that the Tigers had defects that the greatest of managers could not overcome but there are reasons to believe that the veteran star razzed and abused his players. They may not have laid down on him, of course, but they did not hustle for him.

About "Bucky" Harris

Very little was known of Bucky Harris until Clarke Griffith announced that he was the manager of the Washington Senators. Before that time Harris was just the second baseman of an ordinary club, a good player, who had never impressed any one with his color or personality. It was rather freely suggested at the time that Clarke Griffith had hired a cheap yes-man as a figurehead manager and that Harris would have much to say about the team. How mistaken this idea was was shown when Harris, leading the team on his own, went out and won an American league pennant and a world's series in his first year as a manager. Harris, it has been shown, had the ideal qualities of leadership but he had never been given the opportunity to use them.

Rogers Hornsby, the star second baseman for the St. Louis Cardinals and one of the best hitters that ever played baseball was a jolter player of the same type as Sisler and Harris. He would have been a Babe Ruth before the Babe came along if he possessed the same appeal to the crowd that the Babe did. But Hornsby hadn't the color. He didn't have the instinct of the showman and he never did draw at the gate like Cobb or Ruth.

When Hornsby, through a sudden switch in management was placed in charge of the Cardinals recently, it was looked upon as a shrewd financial move by the club owners. Hornsby was drawing $25,000 a year and it would have been good business for the management to get rid of a salaried manager and saddle Hornsby with the leadership without an increase in pay.

It had been rumored about frequently that Hornsby was not popular on the Cardinal team that he was playing all the time for Hornsby averages and as long as the club treasury had enough money to hand him his check semi-monthly he didn't care about the team.

Like Sisler and Harris, though, Hornsby obviously had the qualities of leadership that were not known because they had not been tested. He was a success from the minute he took charge of the team and his skill in handling an ordinary pitching staff must have been a revelation even to the owners of the team and his fond admirers.

WEINERT PROVES EASY FOR HARRY WILLS

After knocking Charlie Weinert, of Newark, through the ropes in the first round of their fight in New York Harry Wills, the Black Panther, knocked him out in the second. Referee Purdy stopped the fight because of Weinert's pitiable condition. Here you see Weinert sprawled on the canvas with Wills standing over him.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

The swat germ in baseball seems to be contagious. The batting punch of the Philadelphia Athletics, abetted by some good pitchers, has made Mack's club the sensation of the majors.

In the surprising showing made by the Athletics no player has taken a more prominent part than "Slim" Harris, Connie's elongated pitcher.

For five years Mack carried Harris because he realized the rangy Texan had great pitching possibilities, a corking fast ball and a sharp breaking curve.

But somehow Harris was unable to win consistently. Less patient managers than Mack would have turned the big fellow loose.

"He's got the stuff to be a star, all he needs is poise," is the way Connie spoke of Harris.

Apparently poise came to Harris overnight. In spring training he loomed up as great a possibility as of yore but still an uncertainty.

The knowledge of how to pitch is another way to express poise from a baseball standpoint. The pitcher who has poise puts some thought back of every pitch, the twirler who lacks it is merely a thrower.

Having poise, Harris proceeded to win for himself a place as one of Mack's most dependable twirlers. In his first 10 starts he registered eight victories.

In a sense the great work of Harris in the box comes as no great surprise because he always showed the stuff that great pitchers must have.

The remarkable work of Harris at the bat, however, has been an even greater mystery than his winning ways as a pitcher.

A pitcher who seldom hit his weight, and "Slim" is far from a 200-pounder, Harris has been a member of the exclusive 300 society all season.

Ever since his debut as a big league pitcher Harris has been one of the richest jokes in the majors as a batter.

The moment he stepped to the plate, the first thing the official scorer would do, was place a large cipher beside his name, signifying an out. Then he would await the method of retiring him. Usually it would be via the strikeout route.

Until this year Harris never actually swung at a ball, just waved his bat at it as if to be courteous.

In one of the games at Shibe Park in Philadelphia this year, Harris hit a home run. Just how no one has explained. It was his first major league home run he ever made. It created an appetite for base hits.

CALLAHAN TOO RUGGED, FAST FOR O'DONNELL

LOS ANGELES, July 8.—Mushy Callahan, Los Angeles lightweight, won a ten-round decision from Johnny O'Donnell, St. Paul, at Vernon, last night.

Mushy, whose real name is Morris Scheer, took the first six rounds, the ninth and tenth were even. O'Donnell held back, just as he did in the Jack Silver fight, until the fight was almost over, but started a heavy offensive in the seventh round and won it and the eighth by some terrific clugging.

Both fighters weighed 138 pounds. Mushy is a former newsboy who was unheard of, even locally, a year ago. He was tossed into the ring with Dode Bergot several months ago and surprised the "wise money" by winning handily. Since then he has mounted increasing obstacles in the way of tough battlers, culminating with his knockout victory over Russ LeRoy, highly touted Fargo, N. D., lightweight, who holds two decisions over Ace Hudkins.

Billy Petrolle, Fargo stablemate of LeRoy, won on a foul in the third round from Johnny LaMar, Mexican lightweight. LaMar had a slight advantage over Petrolle at the time of the bad blow. The foul was accidental but there was nothing for Referee Lee to do but stop the fight.

The house was darkened for ten seconds between the semi-finals and the main event in memory of Jockey Levy, Los Angeles manager, who died yesterday. Levy formerly managed Callahan and Teddy Silva among others.

Since that day, from a feeble batsman Harris has turned into a demon slugger. His hitting now vies with his pitching for premier honors.

As a matter of fact Harris has been quite the "cutup" in American league circles this year. Possibly the fact that until 1925 he played under an assumed name had something to do with his inability to hit.

When he came to the American league five years ago the box scores carried him as Bryan Harris.

This year when the Chicago White Sox retained a rookie outfielder by the name of Harris, the official scores began to list the number of players in the American league who spelled their name that way.

Included in the list was Stanley Harris of Washington. Joe Harris of the same team, formerly with Boston; Spencer Harris of the White Sox and as every one believed, Bryan Harris of the Athletics.

Then Mack's pitcher proceeded to clarify the situation by announcing that for five years his name had been misspelled, it was Harris not Harris. But what's in a name?

EXCELSIORS IN COBB BELIEVES OWEN CARROLL IS REAL FIND

NEW YORK, July 8.—Many causes are advanced for the difficult college pitchers have a making the grade in fast professional company. They are all theories, however.

One of the best opinions ever advanced was given recently by Owen Carroll, the former Holy Cross college star. In four years of college baseball, Carroll won forty and lost only two games and was regarded as the best pitcher developed on a college diamond since Mathewson. After finishing his college course Carroll reported to the Detroit Tigers and was knocked out of the box in his first game against the Boston Red Sox.

"The first thing I discovered was that I was facing eight good batters instead of three that are found usually on a good college team. I found that was continual 'behind' the batter. By that I mean that I was always in the hole. On the college diamond I was always 'in front' of the batter and could wait a few balls to work on him. Major league batters can't be worked on that way. The first thing I discovered was that they would not hit at a bad ball. They wait out the pitcher and I found myself always in the hole where I would have to lay the ball right over the plate and take a chance on a strike on him he will swing invariably at anything, but it doesn't make any difference to a major league batter what you have on him. You can't pull him on a bad ball."

Although he did not make an auspicious start and in spite of the opinion of some smart baseball men that Ty Cobb is not the patient type of a manager to allow a young player a slow start, it is generally believed that Carroll will make good with the Tigers.

As far as Cobb's method of handling the youngsters is concerned it seems that the fiery Detroit manager did just what he was not expected to do.

It is said that Cobb told Carroll in the dressing room that all he was expected to do was to win one of his first six games. When Carroll went to the mound it was observed that all of the Detroit pitchers were on the bench and the bullpen was deserted. When the best of pitchers go to the mound it is the custom to send a catcher and one or two relief pitchers to the bullpen to be ready for a call. Even when Cobb saw that Carroll could not go the limit, he did not let a relief pitcher to warm up until the very last minute.

It was generally understood that Cobb had been attracted to Carroll after he had established himself as a great college pitcher, but it developed later that the Detroit manager landed him when he was a freshman, after he had beaten the Tigers in an exhibition game. He then signed him to a promise that he would play for the Tigers if he decided to enter professional baseball.

This promise was held by Commissioner Landis to be a binding contract when Carroll asked to be released from the pledge. It is understood that the major league club offered him a bonus of $50,000 to sign a contract and he was promised only $500 from the Tigers.

Carroll was a good sport and he did not protest the decision of the Commissioner and Cobb was a good sport and gave him a fine increase in the promised bonus.

ST LOUIS—Harvey Snodgrass, sixth ranking player in the United States and Walter Westbrock, both of Los Angeles, have entered the national clay court tennis tournament, which opens here July 11. Snodgrass was runner up to Bill Tilden in last year's tournament. They also were entered in the doubles.

SHORT SPORTS
Yesterday's hero—George Kelly, Giants' infielder, singled in the eighth and drove in the run that gave New York a 7 to 6 victory over the Pirates.

Hendline's homer in the third inning gave the Phillies a 4 to 3 victory in the second game after the Reds had won the first, 4 to 6.

Harold Rice, rookie outfielder, hit a home run in the ninth and beat the Phillies 5 to 3, after the Browns had grabbed the first game, 12 to 2.

Barnes and Graham held the Cardinals safe and the Braves won a double header at 7 to 4 and 8 to 2.

Seven runs scored off Osborne in the sixth inning gave the Cubs a 10 to 5 victory over the Robins and presented "Rabbit" Maranville with a winner in his first game as manager.

Two runs scored off Dutch Reuther in the first inning gave the White Sox a 2 to 1 victory over the Senators.

EXCELSIORS IN COBB BELIEVES OWEN CARROLL IS REAL FIND

"Tex" Bergman's Excelsior Creamery company team proved itself one of the chief contenders for championship honors in the Santa Ana Class A Indoor Baseball league when it bumped off the fast Garden Grove crew, 7 to 4, in last night's feature game at Poly field.

It takes a good team to beat the Chilpeppers and the Excelsiors did it with grace and elat.

The issue was settled in the fourth and fifth stanzas when the local outfit, which had been trailing the visitors all the way, began finding the unhandy puzzlers of Crist. Two markers were made in the fourth on two passes and an error but the four recorded in the fifth were earned. Scott, Romo, Spencer and Bergman bunched bingles to sew the contest.

Garden Grove made a game effort to drag the game out of the fire in its half of the last inning and did manage to push two men around the hassocks whereupon the cool Mr. Bergman settled down and retired the side sans further damage.

The Class A league tussle had nothing on the Class B curtain-raiser frolic for thrills and excitement. The Pacific Electric won this match, 3 to 2, from Bessers' Toggery in a beautiful pitcher's battle between Jordan and Ray Price.

All of the P. E. tallies were accounted for in the first one, Winslow's fielder's choice contributed No. 2 and Price's wild pitch permitted the third and winning run to ooze across the rubber.

Price singled in the fourth and came home on P. E. errors for the initial Besser run and his teammates managed to chalk up another in the last of the seventh before they were halted.

Jordan allowed only two hits and Price granted but three. Box scores of both games follow:

Piping 'Em Off
Yesterday's hero—George Kelly, Giants' infielder, singled in the eighth and drove in the run that gave New York a 7 to 6 victory over the Pirates.

Hendline's homer in the third inning gave the Phillies a 4 to 3 victory in the second game after the Reds had won the first, 4 to 6.

Harold Rice, rookie outfielder, hit a home run in the ninth and beat the Phillies 5 to 3, after the Browns had grabbed the first game, 12 to 2.

Barnes and Graham held the Cardinals safe and the Braves won a double header at 7 to 4 and 8 to 2.

Seven runs scored off Osborne in the sixth inning gave the Cubs a 10 to 5 victory over the Robins and presented "Rabbit" Maranville with a winner in his first game as manager.

Two runs scored off Dutch Reuther in the first inning gave the White Sox a 2 to 1 victory over the Senators.

Tulane Player Wins Collegiate Golfing Title at Montclair

FRED LAMPRECHT

Here's the new intercollegiate golfing monarch, Fred Lamprecht of Tulane University. He won the honors by defeating A. Westland of the University of Washington in the finals over the Montclair (N. J.) Golf club course the other day, 9 and 7. He now looms as a likely contender for national amateur laurels. His home's in Cleveland.

Junior Chamber Indoor Team to Play Long Beach

Whether the Santa Ana Junior Chamber of Commerce indoor baseball team has a chance to capture Southland honors virtually will be decided tonight when the locals go against Long Beach at Poly field. The teams will mingle at 8:30 o'clock and a nominal fee, to cover expenses, will be charged.

Long Beach has one of the leading teams in the Southern California league and holds a verdict over Santa Ana in a practice game several weeks ago. "Benny" Wilcox probably will draw the Santa Ana pitching assignment, Captain Horace Snow said today.

PIRATES HAVE EIGHT HITTING .330 OR MORE

Club Has Speed, Power and Hustle; Pitchers Going As Well As Any in Loop

NEW YORK, July 8.—"Nothing!" Bill McKechnie, manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, answered without hesitation when he was asked today what had caused his club to ascend from last to first place in the National league.

"We've got a good ball club," he went on to say, "and we're up there because we belong there. We're not claiming any pennant, but we would be safe if we didn't think we had a chance."

"From what I hear around the country, it seems that a lot of the fans think there was something accidental about the spurt that brought us into first place and even if we are playing good baseball they don't think it will last. We had our slump early and got through. The Giants, the Robins and the Reds are having their difficulties now."

Tremendous hitting, good pitching and a fine spirit have made what looks to be a pennant winner out of the Pirates. The most impressive thing observed about this transformed team is its punch, its speed and its hustle. There was a time when the gameness of the team as a whole was questioned and when its seriousness was doubted. But there is certainly nothing timid or slow about this team.

Eight of the team are hitting the ball better than .330 and three others are around .300. Lee Meadows is having the greatest year of his career and has been the mainstay of the team. Yde, the southpaw sensation last year is getting around in shape and the other pitchers, including 43-year-old Babe Adams, have been doing their duty.

Roy Keeler, Max Ames, won from Charlie Dawson and Franklin West; Lin Crawford and Jack Newcomer de-Stradtman and Ed Wagie and Eddie West eliminated Horace Snow and Bernard Parker.

COLOR OF NATION'S FLAG BIG PROBLEM

BERLIN, July 8.—The battle between Monarchists and Republicans over the colors to be used in the national flag has been tracked. The Monarchists wanted the old black red white colors restored; the Republicans held the new colors, black, white, gold, should stay.

President von Hindenburg is understood to have held this was not the proper time for discussion. However, some Germans still want a plebiscite on the question as proposed by the Peoples party.

Regarding the outcome of this battle, a United Press representative questioned ex-Minister Dr. Preuss, author of the German constitution, and acknowledged creator of the Republican flag.

"There is small likelihood of a Monarchist victory," said Dr. Preuss. A majority of the entire electorate, not merely a majority at the polls, is required for any constitutional changes. We must remember that only about 15 millions voted for Hindenburg, while the total electorate numbers 40 millions.

"I can at best claim to have crystallized the idea," said Dr. Preuss, in reply to a further question whether he had conceived the Republican color combination. "The idea was by no means new. The abortive 1848 revolution was fought and defeated under those colors and had during the Hohenzollern regime been the secret ideal of all democratic elements.

"When, however, it was finally adopted by a majority of the Weimar constituent assembly, it stood for more than freedom. Abroad it symbolized the unity, in principle if not in fact, of all German-speaking peoples. At home it was the platform on which the moderate adherents of the old flag and the followers of the socialist red hoped to rear a Republican structure.

"That, alas, they failed to do. The reactionary forces left nothing undone to disturb the process of consolidation. Their present violent campaign for the abolition of the Republican colors is symptomatic of their pin-prick policy, with which they hope to overthrow the republic."

British Inflict Bayonet Wounds On Four Chinese

LONDON, July 8.—British sailors, protecting property in the walled town of Chung King, on the Yang Tse, wounded four Chinese with bayonets in the course of a riot there July 2, according to China dispatches, received here.

The British consul warned the local authorities he would hold them responsible for any repetition of the rioting and also made representations to Peking.

Women and children have been evacuated from Chung King, with the exception of six, ill in the American hospital.

Women and children also have been removed from King Chow to Pak Hei, Kwang Tung province.

DENIES REOPENING OF TEAPOT TRIAL

CHEYENNE, Wyo., July 8.—Declaring he would stand by his original decision, Federal Judge T. Blake Kennedy has denied the government's petition for a reopening of the Teapot Dome oil lease case and entered a decree dismissing the government's suit.

The decree of dismissal gave government counsel, Allee Pomeroy and Owen J. Roberts, 54 days from June 19 to appeal the case and provided that the Teapot receivership be continued until further order.

The dismissal decree reviewed the lengthy decision handed down June 19 and emphasized again the findings of Judge Kennedy at that time.

COAL STOCK LOWER THAN IN 2 YEARS

WASHINGTON, July 8.—The nation's stock of bituminous coal has fallen to 38,000,000 tons—nearly a month's production—according to a survey conducted by the bureau of mines, which is to be announced shortly.

The survey was conducted after John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, in a Scranton speech, had pointed to the possibilities of a bituminous strike because of aggravated union difficulties.

The 38,000,000 tons represent a stock lower than has been on hand at any time in the last two years.

MAY SELL VESSELS WITHIN 10 DAYS

WASHINGTON, July 8.—The 200 shipping board vessels advertised for sale for scrapping probably will be sold within 10 days, President Leigh Palmer, of the emergency fleet corporation has submitted to the U. S. shipping board his recommendations for the awards among the 21 bidders, and the commission will act finally upon them as soon as Commissioner Thompson returns from Europe, shortly after July 15.

Death Sentence Is Given Slayer

LOS ANGELES, July 8.—Earl J. Clark, convicted slayer of Charles Silva, must hang in the state's prison at San Quentin on September 18, Superior Judge Sidney Reece has decreed.

Clark, a confessed bootlegger, stabbed Silva, a merchant sailor, to death at Harbor City last March.

Evidence at the trial disclosed that Mamie Stephens, 18, had escaped from a girl's reformatory and taken refuge in Clark's home. Silva visited Clark several nights in March and was urged by Miss Stephens to take her away from the place. Silva replied to her request by placing a red rose in her hair, and when Clark saw the rose he turned on Silva and stabbed him, the evidence showed.

Eucalyptus Covers Former Bare Areas

EUREKA, Calif., July 8.—Forty, 50 or more years ago, no one is certain just when, seeds of the eucalyptus, the Australian gum tree, were brought to California and put in the earth.

The result is large areas of forests in the state where no trees grew before.

Now California is returning the gift by exportation of seeds of the redwood, the sequoia sempervirens.

A shipment of 150 pounds of redwood seeds, which means a lot because the seeds are very small, is now on its way to the Selwyn Timber company, of Auckland, New Zealand, sent by the Pacific Lumber company, of Scotia, near here.

Bullheaded Man Pays Court Fine

HARRISBURG, Ore., July 8.—Downright bullheaded petulance cost an Oakridge business man $35 here.

Charles Hupp asked the visitor not to drive over the cables with which he was moving a house. The motorist paid no attention to the request, driving off the road to pass over one of the cables.

Not content, he turned and drove back across the other cable. Hupp swore out a complaint and the man was arrested and fined $25. A volley of oaths followed, and Hupp swore out another complaint.

The language cost the visitor another $10.

Santa Monica Will Build Larger Pier

SANTA MONICA, July 8.—Plans to construct a $5,000,000 pier, designed to make Santa Monica the Atlantic City of the Pacific coast, have been launched by a local amusement company.

Work on the new pier, which will take two years to complete, is to be started early this month. The plans include a swimming pool 500 feet long, with ornamental fountains and bandstand in the center, with seats for 4000 persons around it, an auditorium seating another 6000, a motion picture theater and a million dollar hotel.

The bathing pool probably will be the scene of swimming events of the 1928 Olympic games and other water fiestas.

No Shirtsleeve Legislation By Canadian Body

OTTAWA, July 8.—"It is in order for members of this house to appear in dishabille," H. C. Hocken, Conservative, Toronto West, inquired in the house of commons. At the time the question was put four members were seated in the house in their shirt sleeves, while a fifth was minus a collar, but wearing a coat.

"Members are required," stated Speaker Lemieux, "to maintain decorum in the house according to the rules. I would be sorry that in Canada we should make our politics in shirt sleeves."

Mr. Head Closes Weeks-Head Debate On Merits of Torrens Land Title Law

Santa Ana, July 3, 1925.

Editor Register:—Dear Sir—You have kindly granted me the privilege of closing the discussion on Torrens title law. In doing so, I shall endeavor to avoid repetition and shall only briefly touch on some points not already covered in previous communications.

Short-Cut Procedure

The Torrens law provides a method of registering land title by which the applicant presents to the court a complete abstract of his record title made by a competent searcher under bond. By that method the attorney and the judge would be informed as to whether all necessary parties had been served with notice, as to what easements, encumbrances, restrictions and reservations there are on the property, and as to its correct description. Based upon such a procedure the court could render an intelligent and well founded judgment. But that procedure would require considerable time and careful work and would cost probably two or three hundred dollars for the average tract of land. This does not suit the Torrens title solicitor, who wants to talk of cheapness of Torrens titles and whose main desire it is to make a quick clean-up and pass on to new fields. Unfortunately, the Torrens law provides a short-cut method where the petitioner alleges that the applicant and his predecessors have been in actual possession of, and have paid all taxes on, the land for more than five years. This is the method uniformly followed and I think the only one ever used in Orange county. The result has been that in these job-lot proceedings, without any adequate search of the records, the court has been powerless to prevent from entering into the registration proceedings numerous errors and omissions, many of which are such that no statute of limitations can cure. Heretofore I have given a few examples of such mistakes and defects. They were not imaginary cases, but actual instances now of record in our own county, and many others could be cited.

The State Guaranty
It is claimed that because of the one-year statute of limitations paragraph in the Torrens law the Torrens title becomes absolute and guaranteed by the state one year after its registration. Such a statute of limitations is of no benefit to the person whose land has not been described at all or has been incorrectly described in his Torrens proceeding and certificate, or in cases where he required notices have not been been seen such insurance does not amount to much, and section 105 of the act in reality merely says to the Torrens holder, "You may sue to recover your damage and collect it if you can." It might be interesting to add that the cost to the county of Orange for maintaining this system exceeds the fees derived therefrom by $75.00 to $100.00 each month.

Some Questions

The law of California provides that a person may avail himself of the homestead law by recording a declaration of homestead; the Torrens title law makes no provision for declaration of homestead on registered land and provides that nothing recorded in the ordinary way shall affect in any way the title of the registered land. Therefore there seems to be no way for a Torrens title holder to benefit by the homestead law. Again, the law provides that a judgment duly docketed becomes a lien against all real property owned by the judgment debtor in the county where the judgment is docketed. According to the Torrens title law the docketing of such a judgment would have no effect on registered land. Question: Would you be safe in buying a piece of registered land when the certificate of title contains no memorial indicating that a judgment is docketed against the owner, when in fact such a judgment has been docketed? Also, the Torrens title law gives the tax collector five days after taxes have gone delinquent within which to file in connection with each piece of registered land a notice of the delinquency. Yet there is no way for the tax collector to know which lands are registered and which not registered, except by a slow and tedious search of the records. Even in a small county like ours a search of the records as to each parcel of land on which taxes have gone delinquent to ascertain whether or not it is registered land is a practical impossibility within the five day period. Suppose the tax collector finds it impossible to comply with that requirement, or by mistake fails to file the proper notice of delinquency in connection with the registered land, yet his records will show the tax delinquent on that land. Under those conditions, if you buy the registered land your registrar's certificate of title gives you no notice of any delinquent taxes. Will you estimate payment of those taxes or cape payment of those taxes or the necessity later of redeeming the land? These and other questions arise in connection with the Torrens title law which as yet have remained unanswered.

No Check on Title
Let us assume that by rare good fortune a parcel of land is registered under the Torrens title procedure correctly and regularly in every particular. As time goes by, according to the usual title experience, leases, mortgages, releases and other transactions occur affecting the title to the property, and the various instruments are filed in connection with the Torrens title and memorials entered on the certificate of title by the registrar. Necessarily, these memorials are but brief references or abstracts, and in connection with such instruments as oil leases, party wall agreements, etc., can give but a very vague idea of the nature of the instruments. As these transactions occur, unless the owner goes to the usual expense of having an examination made by a title expert, there is no check as to the correctness of the various instruments. If the title expert must be employed in the usual way, the holder of the Torrens title has saved nothing in the way of expense. If the title expert is not employed, errors are almost certain to get into the record and cause trouble sooner or later. Any person purchasing land held under Torrens title would be very unwise not to require an examination and report by a title company. The banks which occasionally lend money on land held under the Torrens title require such an examination and report before they will make a loan. It is apparent, therefore, that the claim that registering land under Torrens title saves the owner expense is not founded on fact, and as I have previously stated the title companies need not fear loss of business by reason of the Torrens title law.

Certificate of Title

The statement has been made that a certificate or guaranty of title is a mere opinion and, by implication at least, it has been alleged that the ordinary record of title is a vague, uncertain and undesirable thing. In the case of Title & Insurance company vs. Los Angeles, 61 California Appellate, 232, the appellate court holds that a certificate or guaranty of title is a contract of indemnity, upon which the title company issuing it is liable and responsible to the full extent of its assets, including the large amount of bonds it is required to deposit with the state of California. The holder of a record title to real property in California, backed by a guaranty of title, issued by a duly licensed California title company, has a perfect title under a system which has worked successfully for generations and has behind it the law and decisions of the state ever since its admission to the union.

Tax Titles

At this point I will admit that the Torrens title law has been found useful in one particular. It is very well known that a tax title is the next thing to no title at all. It is not unusual in our state for the purchaser of a tax title to find it impossible to perfect that title in the ordinary way because of the impossibility of locating the original owner or ascertaining whether he be living or dead. Such a tax title can be converted into a Torrens title, and while the latter is not a satisfactory or desirable thing, it is at least better than a tax title. I must confess that I am among those who have taken advantage of that fact, and have registered several lots on which I held tax titles which it was impossible or impracticable to perfect in the usual way of suit to quiet title.

I have been surprised that during our discussion Mr. Weeks has not referred to this fact, and I have been prepared to explain as above how I happen to hold those Torrens titles and to show that it is not a case of approving of Torrens title, but that even a Torrens title is better than the tax title which I previously held on those lots.

Good Judgment

Let it be remembered that in this discussion we are not considering title laws of Cook county, Illinois, or of New Zealand or Canada, nor the abstract theory of the Torrens system; we are concerned with the actual practical working of the land title law in California, and particularly in Orange county. It will be noticed that in our county practically all of the persons who have permitted their land to be registered are persons of small holdings and small business experience who have been induced to register their land by Torrens title solicitors working at so much per victim. If this law is such a desirable and successful thing in practice, how does it happen that after being in effect more than ten and a half years we do not find such competent and experienced business men as James Irvine, C. C. Chapman, W. B. Williams, Samuel Kraemer, A. J. Crookshank and Will Huff placing any of their large real estate holdings under the Torrens title system, and how does it happen that Mr. Weeks himself is shown by the records to own several parcels of land in Orange county and not one of them held under Torrens title? This, in spite of the fact that he is posing as a reformed title man whose conscience so hurts him on account of his misspent years in the title business that he is constrained to proclaim to a suffering world the beauties and desirability of the Torrens title system and to declare, by implication at least, that only a fool or a knave will fail to avail himself of the privilege of placing his land under Torrens title.

Respectfully submitted,

This Name Is Too Much for Judge

NEW YORK, July 8.—Werchmed-neprowsker failed to get by in the Brooklyn supreme court. It was given as the name for a proposed "progressive society," the members of which were seeking approval of a certificate of incorporation.

"I am constrained to refuse approval of this certificate of incorporation," said Justice Russell Benedict, "on the ground that the name is un-American."

"I will not stamp with my approval any society to be organized which has the name of a foreign place, especially where there is nothing to indicate in the papers of the place from which Werchmed-neprowsker is said to be derivative."

FARM NEWS FROM EVERYWHERE

SPRAY QUIZ IS REQUESTED BY BUREAU CHIEFS

Investigation of sprays used in Orange county orchards is asked in a resolution passed by the directors of the Orange County Farm Bureau at their monthly meeting in the Hall of Records building yesterday.

George P. Gray, chief of the division of chemistry, state department of agriculture, will be asked to make the investigation.

The directors took action following a report by a committee from the El Modena and Villa Park-Olive farm centers, who declared that a number of citrus trees in their district had been ruined by sprays.

Members of the committee were R. F. Raich, chairman; Henry Myer, Mike Shaffort and J. H. Edwards.

Arrangements were made for the entertainment of presidents and secretaries of the farm centers of the seven southern counties, in Birch park, Santa Ana, all day July 28.

The principal speaker will be Mrs. Pearl Covell, assistant secretary of the California Farm Bureau federation, who will speak on "The Relationship Between the Federation and the Farm Centers."

The committee named by the directors to have charge of the program consists of J. A. Smiley, chairman; George Kuechel, F. B. Brown, J. M. Brubaker, C. B. Henry and George Vandenberg.

It was reported that 25 per cent of the exhibit space at the annual county fair held September 22 to 26 has been sold. Indications are that the fair will be one of the most successful ever held in the county.

The directors approved the budget submitted by Farm Advisor Harold E. Wahlberg for his department.

50 STUDENTS PLAN VISIT TO COUNTY
A group of 50 horticultural students enrolled for summer session at the citrus experiment station will visit Orange county Saturday for the purpose of studying the growing of subtropical fruits in this section.

The group will be conducted through the county by representatives from the farm advisor's office. Meeting the group at Olive in the morning about 8:30 o'clock, the farm advisor will conduct the students to a number of groves where irrigation practices in relation to wind injury will be explained.

At the San Joaquin ranch, C. V. Newman, manager, will present interesting orchard data covering irrigation and methods of growing avocado, citrus and walnuts. The experiment station's walnut plots on irrigation experiments will also be visited at this ranch.

The planting of papayas at the Irvine ranch will also be visited. The original Sharpless avocado tree at the Sharpless ranch, the original trees of the Monroe, Northrop and Bartlett avocados will be the subject of group study.

Other ranches to be visited during the afternoon will be the C. P. Taft ranch near Orange, where persimmons and loquats will be seen, and the Thales ranch at Fullerton, where persimmons, loquats and cherimoyas and avocados will be studied.

WASTE RAISINS TO BE UTILIZED
FRESNO, July 8.—Housewives of the country will soon be buying raisin sirup as a new flavoring extract for their baking and cooking.

The sirup will be the product of a large plant to be built at Fresno for the manufacture of raisin sirup from the surplus and substandard crop. It is being planned by the raisin growers of California, and is expected to cost about $200,000.

Three years of laboratory work and sales promotion by the raisin growers organization have satisfied the growers that there is a large demand for the sirup, especially among bakers.

PROBLEMS CONFRONTING CITRUS INDUSTRY ARE OUTLINED BY WAHLBERG

By Harold E. Wahlberg
Farm Advisor of Orange County

In keeping with the times and in view of the general economic situation of agriculture, it would seem advisable to consider the sessions of the fourth annual Southern California Citrus institute and the eighth annual pest control school, a conference on citrus economics. Commercial organizations are today giving considerable attention to economic conferences and emphasizing the need for an economic program of conservation, not only in private business and industrial undertakings, but also in governmental policies.

Should not the same attitude be taken by agriculturists as a class, inasmuch as they represent the largest industry in the country? Railroads are employing efficiency engineers to give a closer study to overhead expenses. Industrialists are doing the same thing. If this is doing the same thing for big business, it would seem also very desirable from the producers standpoint.

Factors in Farm Profits
In making a study of the farming business from an efficiency standpoint, four important factors present themselves as a direct influence on the profit that might be made from a given farming unit. They are: Volume production per unit; quality production; economical production; and efficient marketing. All four factors are essential to profitable farming. The first three, involving the volume of production, quality production and economic production, are within the direct control of the grower. He can largely influence the amount of production secured from the acre of ground; he has within his power to influence the quality of that production; and he has considerable say about the amount of overhead which is required to carry on his farming business. It is true that the cost of materials and the cost of labor is comparatively high and cannot be materially changed by the grower but he does have the selection of proper materials, efficiency of machinery, and judgment of the proper time for various orchard operations, within his control. It is upon these latter points that the citrus institute will concentrate its discussions.

The fourth factor named above, which has to do with efficient marketing, is an important one from the industry standpoint, but it is not within the control of the grower or producer as are the first three factors mentioned. The marketing of the product and the final price is largely influenced by the law of supply and demand, but more largely influenced by the purchasing ability of the centers of population to which the product is shipped.

The greatest weakness of the citrus industry of this in the past. When the laborer is enjoying steady labor and good income, agricultural prices and fruit prices strengthen, when, on the other hand, labor and wage scales depreciate, there is similar depreciation on agricultural products. So we see that the greatest opportunity for marginal profits in the growing of agricultural commodities lies largely in the growing end of the farming business.

Successful Citrus Culture
In the discussion of efficient production, there are six essential factors that materially affect quantity and quality of the product. These essentials are: Trees of good parentage, orchard protection, disease control, pest control, proper fertilization, soil moisture control.

Good Trees Necessary
It is not necessary to say much about the influence of good stock in production. We know that this is essential to good livestock production and it has exactly the same bearing on good orchard production. We cannot expect to get good results from scrub trees and yet there are many growers in the citrus business who are endeavoring to cope with great odds against them in trying to get a reasonable living from worthless trees. In some cases, these trees were planted accidentally; in other cases, they were deliberately planted with the mistaken idea that nursery seconds or cheap trees would eventually outgrow their early deficient characteristics. If we do not have a good tree to start with, most of our other orchard operations will be ineffective.

Orchard Protection
Where unfavorable exposures obtain which might involve injury from strong winds, or from excessive and occasional cold, proper means of orchard protection are desirable and in many cases absolutely essential. The past year has greatly demonstrated to several citrus sections in this country that either windbreak protection or orchard heating would have been a material asset to the grove. Where orchards are exposed to the annual desert winds, a devitalization takes place which accumulates from year to year, where the winds are regular. In such exposures, artificial protection is essential to permanent and profitable production.

The same may be said of orchards located in cold exposures. Without proper protection from orchard heaters, it has been definitely demonstrated that production diminishes and becomes unprofitable.

Diseases and Pest Control
Disease control involves an important obligation on the part of the grower to his trees. Every tree should be visited at least once and preferably twice a year for the special purpose of inspecting for any new outbreaks of diseases of tree pests. "A stitch in time saves nine" is an old axiom which has a practical application in the control of citrus diseases and pests. A very commendable method of keeping in touch with the actual conditions found in the grove is the charting method recommended by the agricultural extension service. A map or chart should be made by each grower showing the location and condition of each tree in the orchard. This will serve as a guide in checking up on the results obtained from the treatment and control measures used by the grower in controlling diseases or pest conditions.

Efficient pest control is not only influenced by the materials used but is largely dependent upon the time of application, and this is one factor that is largely within the control of the grower. His cost of fumigation may result in a commercial kill if applied at the proper time, or may be absolutely lost if applied at the wrong time. This is just one of the many details in the economics of citrus production.

Proper Fertilization
Probably more leaks have been found in this phase of orchard management than in any other item of expenses involved in orchard upkeep. There is apparently considerable confusion in the minds of the growers, and possibly some distributors, concerning the question of citrus fertilization. This confusion is brought about largely from unwise comparisons and the lack of giving other phases of orchard management than soil fertilization, credit for results that might be obtained from fertilizer practices. The processes of plant food by feeder roots are complex and the chemical reactions taking place in the soil areas reached by the roots are little appreciated and understood by the average grower. The relationship of the soil flora and the application of plant food to the soil are given very little attention by the individual orchardist. In his eagerness to supply the necessary plant food to his trees, and also realizing, in many cases, his unfamiliarity with the complex of plant food supply, availability and assimilation, he attempts to imitate the neighbor's practice or hears the grower's experience, who might have tried this or that with apparent results, not taking into consideration the influence of soil, water and previous fertilizer practices.

Close Attention Urged
I maintain, that in light of hundreds of observations made along this line, thousands of dollars could be saved by the citrus grower by giving closer attention to the fundamentals of tree fertilization. I visited one grove that had received 24 pounds of nitrogen per tree in the last three years. Nine pounds for the three years would have been ample. A better understanding of plant physiology and growth should be sought by the grower in order that he may more intelligently and thereby more economically apply those essentials that can be used by the trees. All frills and fancies should be eliminated. The citrus experimenter and the college of agriculture are placing before the grower the best unbiased knowledge available on this important phase of orchard management, with the object of improving tree efficiency and further than that, the efficiency of the grower's dollar. Bulletins are available.

Soil Moisture Control
Last but not least of the six essentials to efficient orchard management is that of soil moisture control. It has been said very aptly by a soil investigator that "soil moisture control is soil fertilizer control." Too many of us in the past have been inclined to consider orchard irrigation practice as separate and apart from other phases of tree management, but as we investigate the many conditions confronting individual trees and groups of trees, we find that soil moisture control or irrigation practice is closely associated with available soil fertility, tree diseases, wind protection, cultivation and even pest control. Except for the first essential, a tree of good parentage, I would place soil moisture control next in importance because of its close bearing on the other essentials, and the question of soil moisture control is one of economics. The cost of water is influenced by the amount used at each application and throughout the year. If we are using 25 to 50 per cent more water than is actually needed to penetrate the three or four feet of root zone, then we are extravagant in the amount of water used. Not only that, but the cost of pumping is increased. There is the wear and tear on the machinery, the extra fuel charge and greatest of all is the loss through leaching of the soil fertility. The valuable plant foods that are necessary for tree life are in soluble form. The position of these soluble plant foods in the soil is materially affected by the movement of water. If we carry these solutions down below the root systems of the trees we are materially cutting down the amount of foods available to the trees. This is particularly true in the lighter soils and in the loam soils.

Now, how about the heavy clay and adobe soils? The same quoted above holds true except in a different way. If the heavier soils are kept continually saturated with moisture, the roots become inactive, sluggish, soil flora and bacteria become inactive and in extreme cases, the roots will rot. Roots in these conditions, of course, cannot supply the necessary food solution to the tree and, as a consequence, tree growth stops, leaves turn yellow and finally defoliate.

FARMERS' HEAD

Here is O. E. Bradfute, president of the American Farm Bureau federation, who declares that agriculturists of the United States are $500,000,000 better off this year than last.

FARM CENTER TO HEAR TALK BY WINBIGLER

Meetings of two farm centers, Villa Park-Olive and Garden Grove, were announced today at the farm bureau office.

Speakers at the Villa Park-Olive session, which will take place in the Olive Community hall at 7:30 o'clock tonight, will be Theo Winbigler, local undertaker, who will tell of his recent around-the-world tour, and County Supervisor Leon Whitsell. Refreshments will be served.

Harry Welch, secretary of the Orange County Harbor Chamber of Commerce, will speak on the harbor project at the Garden Grove organization's gathering, Thursday evening, at 7:30 o'clock. A group of Boy Scouts will demonstrate skill at first aid work. Refreshments will be served.

TEST 994 COUNTY COWS DURING JUNE

A total of 994 cows were tested during the month of June by the tester employed by the dairy department of the Orange County Farm Bureau. These cows averaged 996 pounds of milk and 37.9 pounds of butterfat. This is a pound less than the average for the month preceding. A total of 353 cows produced 40 pounds of butterfat or more.

Mrs. M. Vanderbilt had the high herd under 25 cows. Her herd averaged 46 pounds of butterfat. H. L. Wakeham had high herd under 40 cows with an average of 39.3 pounds of butterfat. Osterkamp brothers had high herd of 40 cows and averaged 46.4 pounds of butterfat. Fred Ramseier had the highest butterfat producer. One of his cows produced 101.3 pounds of butterfat.

The ten high cows in the association for the month are as follows:

Fred Ramseier, "Blackie," 2250 pounds of milk, 101.3 pounds of butterfat; Segerstrom & Sons, "27," 2250 pounds of milk, 90 pounds of butterfat; H. L. Wakeham, "20," 1839 pounds of milk, 86.4 pounds of butterfat; Osterkamp brothers, "56," 2133 pounds of milk, 85.3 pounds of butterfat; H. L. Wakeham, "Sara," 1668 pounds of milk, 85.1 pounds of butterfat; Osterkamp brothers, "596," 1830 pounds of milk, 81.8 pounds of butterfat; R. F. Hazard, "Slim," 1314 pounds of milk, 80.2 pounds of butterfat; Osterkamp brothers, "119," 1428 pounds of milk, 80 pounds of butterfat; Segerstrom & Sons, "99," 1614 pounds of milk, 79.1 pounds of milk; Segerstrom & Sons, "10," 1812 pounds of milk, 77.9 pounds of butterfat.

ORCHARD HEATING TO BE DISCUSSED

An opportunity will be given citrus growers of Orange county to hear an impartial and neutral discussion of the protection of citrus groves from frost by heating at an evening demonstration planned by the farm advisor's office. The date for this meeting is Monday, August 3, 7:30 o'clock, at the West Orange grammar school.

Various types of heaters and methods of lighting same will be demonstrated by experts. According to statement from the farm advisor's office, a survey is now being conducted by the college of agriculture to determine the economics of orchard heating in relation to frost protection.

Prof. R. W. Hodgson and W. R. Schoonover, citrus specialist, have been engaged to make the survey. A progress report will be presented at the meeting. All growers are invited to attend.

BUREAU CHIEF SEES PROFITS FOR FARMERS

CHICAGO, July 8.—When the American farmer balanced his books June 30 to mark the close of the 1924-1925 crop year, he found himself $500,000,000 better off than he was a year ago, says O. E. Bradfute, president of the American Farm Bureau federation.

"When I say the farmer found himself $500,000,000 richer by the end of June than he was at the same time last year, I speak nationally, of course," Bradfute explains.

"However, this increased prosperity is by no means evenly distributed. It is principally found in wheat, cotton and tobacco sections, some of which had very unsatisfactory yields the year before and in some cases for two or three years past.

Profit in Midwest
"Should you draw a line from Chicago to Savannah, generally speaking, all north and east of that line, including also Wisconsin, show an actual increase in income over the previous year. This same condition prevails in all of that section of the United States west and south of the line drawn from Spokane to New Orleans. The increased income lies in the states within those imaginary lines.

"The largest gain has been felt in North Dakota, where there is a 95 per cent increase in farm income. Oklahoma has a 51 per cent increase; Kansas 36; Mississippi 33; Arkansas 31 per cent, ranging down to a slight increase of 2 per cent for Iowa.

"A loss in income for 25 per cent is marked up for North Carolina; South Carolina, 21 per cent; Kentucky, 18 per cent; Washington, 12 per cent; Idaho, 11; Oregon, 9; California, 7, and Texas, 3 per cent."

In face of the facts that winter wheat is the smallest crop in the last 10 years and that more than one-fifth of the area planted in winter wheat last summer has been diverted to other crops, and other discouraging situations that are affecting the growing of food stuffs, President Bradfute is optimistic.

Conditions Improving
"There has been a steady progress for two years," he says. "Farmers are in a better frame of mind.

"Great industries have shown a developing interest in finding out the true agricultural situation. This is encouraging.

"Of added importance during the past year has been the rapid development of the use of radio in getting to the farmer educational and economic information of utmost importance.

"The problem of over-production is being met in two ways. First, better communication and information systems are being set up so that the farmer has a better background for his production work.

"Second, diversification. The theory of diversification is finding its converts. The economic depression that followed the war was a stern teacher."

NEWS from ORANGE COUNTY

MAY SUBMIT $300,000 BOND ISSUE TO VOTERS AT BEACH TO PROVIDE NEW H. S. PLANT

HUNTINGTON BEACH, July 8.—A resolution providing for the calling of a $300,000 bond election for the erection of a new high school plant will probably be passed at a special meeting of the high school board of trustees at the high school Thursday morning, it was announced today, by Thomas Berry, consulting engineer for the school trustees.

Plans for the new high school plant are being prepared this week and will be approved by the school board before any action is taken. According to previous announcements made by the members of the school board, a pamphlet giving in detail all the intentions of the board of trustees will be published and distributed to the voters before the election.

Economy on the part of the school trustees has resulted in the school treasury being in an excellent condition and considerable money will be used from this fund.

It is estimated that a school building costing $400,000 will be built.

Tentative plans, which have received the favorable attention of the school board, are for a school on the combined Spanish and Italian style. The combination of the two types of architecture is one of the most popular in Southern California at the present time, according to Berry.

It is expected that bonding experts will attend the meeting, at the request of the members of the school trustees, and advise them as to the proper steps to take in issuing the bonds. The school trustees plan to have a new school plant ready for the opening of school in 1926.

Other county chambers may follow the same course, it was indicated by the report that the various secretaries are prepared to assist each other in the campaign to be held this year throughout the county.

Local workers, it was pointed out, would be about as successful in obtaining new members as a professional campaigner, thus effecting a considerable financial saving without reducing the effectiveness of the drive.

The directors also voted to take three booths for an industrial display at the Orange county fair, which will be held in Santa Ana this fall.

Leon O. Whitsett, chamber president, reported that the county supervisors have requested the Orange county association of commercial secretaries to handle Orange county publicity matters up to the chairmanship of F. C. Slabaugh, county purchasing agent.

The secretaries are to meet with the supervisors and Slabaugh at the Santa Ana chamber of commerce next Tuesday at 10 a. m. to go into details of the proposed county publicity campaign. With this project, the additional expense of appointing a county publicity agent is saved to the taxpayers, it was stated.

DROP CHARGES ON DIVERSION OF MOTORISTS

NEWPORT BEACH, July 9.—Complete exoneration of the police department has resulted from an investigation of the charge of Balboa citizens that traffic was diverted from entering the city on the day of the bathing girls' parade.

This action was taken by the city board of trustees after hearing and discussion of the controversy.

It was considered advisable to drop the matter, at the same time assuring that every precaution possible will be taken in the future to prevent a recurrence of the situation.

The original petition, asking for an adjustment, was brought before the board of trustees recently, signed by some 60 individuals. Requests were made for the official heads of those responsible for the alleged diversion of traffic.

City Marshal J. A. Porter declared the charges to be groundless. He branded the action "petulant politics" and said that his department did not discriminate between ends of the city.

Broadcast Music Of Beach Band By Amplifiers, Plan
HUNTINGTON BEACH, July 8.—Amplifiers to broadcast music by the municipal band may be installed, if investigation now being carried on by a special committee of the chamber of commerce proves the plan practical.

A number of improvements for the convenience of the public have been suggested and are being investigated by special committees of the chamber of commerce. New signs placed at the top of the bluff where the bathing girls go down to the beach, warning of the danger of bathing in the surf where life guard protection is not offered, will soon be erected. A special fund will be asked of the city to carry on the work of leveling the bluff between the railroad tracks and the beach to give an unobstructed view of the ocean.

Reports of the celebration given here July 4 and 5 were given by the committees in charge. Special committees were appointed to investigate the condition of the pier at Twenty-third street.

Huntington Beach Merchants Chalk Up Record Sales
HUNTINGTON BEACH, July 8.—A record for business was established here July 4 and 5, according to reports made today to the chamber of commerce. Merchants declared business was better for the two day holiday than for any similar period in the past five years.

Coupled with the increased business activity here July 4 and 5, comes the announcement today by J. A. Armitage, secretary of the chamber of commerce, that inquiries in his office during the past month have also increased. People seeking information about the chamber of commerce last month with a view of locating for a home or business establishment numbered 595, according to Armitage.

Business men when interviewed today were optimistic for the business possibilities for the remainder of this year. Bankers report that business conditions are better than they have been in years, and are laying out a progressive program for the coming summer and fall season.

HULL INSPECTORS LOOK OVER BOATS
NEWPORT BEACH, July 9.—J. A. Moody and S. A. Kennedy of San Pedro, federal hull and boiler inspectors, inspected the passenger boats here yesterday to insure the enforcement of safety measures for the protection of the public.

Mayor George P. Wilson, with other city officials, conducted the federal agents about the district. At noon the party had luncheon at the Newport Harbor Yacht club.

Specifications were made for the transportation of passengers in the boats. The fishing barge, "Estherhume," launched off Newport pier was inspected and regulations made for the number of passengers. Boats on the bay were gone over by the officers.

According to Councilman Fred Young, who was one of the party, an authorized government officer may possibly be stationed permanently at Newport to enforce harbor regulations.

CHAMBER HITS AT PLAN TO CUT P. E. SCHEDULE

HUNTINGTON BEACH, July 8.—Abandonment of through service between this city and Long Beach by the Pacific Electric railroad, will be investigated by the chamber of commerce. The matter was taken up at the regular session of the chamber of commerce yesterday when announcement was made of the filing with the railroad commission of a petition asking for the abandonment of the service by the Pacific Electric railroad.

Through service between Long Beach and Huntington Beach was inaugurated several months ago. The Pacific Electric railroad established the service when the Crown Stage lines applied for a franchise between Huntington Beach and Seal Beach. The franchise between the two cities is the only one lacking to complete a stage route to Long Beach. The Crown Stage lines, in a hearing held at the city hall, were refused the franchise when the railroad company expressed its willingness to establish the service asked by the people, it is said.

In their application for permission to discontinue the through service between Huntington Beach and Long Beach, the Pacific Electric company states that the travel over the line is not enough to warrant the service.

The matter was placed in the hands of a special committee which will confer with and assist the Crown Stage in securing a franchise if the electric service is discontinued. The Crown Stage lines plan to operate a through stage from Riverside to Long Beach, if they secure the franchise from Seal Beach to Huntington Beach.

TWO PETITIONS ARE REJECTED BY CITY BOARD

NEWPORT BEACH, July 7.—A deaf ear was turned to the petitions of citizens here for the repeal of two ordinances by the city board of trustees at the regular meeting of the council Monday night.

A protest against the ordinance charging a fee of $5 per day for outside ice companies to distribute ice in the city received no action.

Thirty-five signatures of townspeople were on the petition for the repeal of the ordinance. It was charged that the ruling was "class legislation" discriminating against outside interests.

Members of the board of trustees held that the ordinance was beneficial in that it protected home companies. Trustee L. S. Wilkinson expressed the view that "tariff protection" was advisable.

A second complaint against doubling the charge for making water connections by an increase to $20 was tabled. K. I. Fulton of the K. I. Fulton company in Corona del Mar asserted that the raise came at an inopportune time when numbers of owners were planning to make connections on the new water system.

Actual figures were presented at the council meeting to show that the cost to the city for installing a water meter exceeded the charge made to property holders.

The climax of 50 years oil experience
—the Veedol "film of protection"

THE Veedol that you buy today wasn't perfected in a day—or a year—or 10 years. It is the result of 50 years experience in making high grade lubricating oils. The "film of protection" that Veedol gives your motor is the climax of this long experience—the fruit of years of knowing how to make high quality motor oils.

Every drop of finished Veedol comes from selected crude. Tide Water owns its own oil wells. The oil is pumped through Tide Water's own pipe lines. It is refined, tested and packed in sealed containers at Tide Water's own refinery. That explains its uniformly high quality.

Veedol is then sent to the Pacific Coast by boat in the original sealed containers—at a shipping cost of less than one cent a quart. That's all it costs to bring the "film of protection" to you!

Put the Veedol "film of protection" on the job, safeguarding your motor. Drive up to any Veedol station for Veedol crankcase service—the orange and black Veedol signs are everywhere. Be sure to ask for Veedol by name.

EVENING SALUTATION

Let the weakest, let the humblest remember, that in his daily course he can, if he will, shed around him almost a heaven. Kindly words, sympathizing attentions, watchfulness against wounding men's sensitiveness—these cost very little, but they are priceless in their value. Are they not almost the staple of our daily happiness? From hour to hour, from moment to moment, we are supported, blest, by small kindnesses.

EARTHQUAKES WIDESPREAD

These earthquake shocks are occurring in the United States lately with such frequency as to cause a good deal of alarm. They come not only in the usual sections but in areas long regarded as immune. It begins to look as if no part of the country is safe from tremors.

The old earth evidently is in one of her periods of readjustment. The crust, slowly shrinking as it cools, has to settle a bit now and then, or shove a little this way or that, to equalize the stresses and strains.

It has always been so since the molten globe hardened. It will always continue so, geologists say, until the process is complete and the globe is cold and dead like the moon. That will be many millions of years.

But the quakes diminish in intensity as time goes on. There are evidences in the ancient rocks of upheavals, subsidences and fractures enormously more violent than any recorded in human history. The crust thickens and strengthens like a coat of ice on a northern lake in winter. Even a thick crust will crack occasionally, but the cracking does less and less harm.

Most of our quakes are trivial and would be scarcely known except for the seismograph. It is surprising that the worst of them do so little damage, compared with what they might do. A historian has dug up records proving that in 1811 a terrific earthquake shook down log cabins at New Madrid, Mo. The same thing now would be a disaster. Our civilization really gets off easy, in its contest with great natural forces, in spite of its great cities and transportation systems, its huge buildings and its mazes of electric wires, sewers, water mains and reservoirs and gas and oil pipes.

A CONGRESSIONAL COMMA

It doesn't seem to have been generally recognized that the real criminal in the Teapot Dome case was a missing comma. The 25,000-word ruling handed down by the federal judge in Wyoming, seems to have turned on that. In the interest of sound punctuation, if not of sound law and morals, the matter should be made clear and memorable.

It appears, according to a digest of that ruling made at the time by the Associated Press, that Congress, in omitting a comma from its act of June 4, 1920, regarding jurisdiction over the naval oil reserves, assigned all authority to the Secretary of the Navy and tied its own hands.

"The phrase referred to provides that the Navy Secretary is directed to 'conserve, use and operate the same (naval oil reserves) in his discretion.'"

The omission of a comma after the word "same," the judge decided, prevented any construction being placed on the phrase that would enable Congress to participate in directing the manner in which the law was to be administered. The insertion of a comma at the critical place would have made it all different, permitting Congress to hold Secretary Fall to account. With the comma missing, everything was straight and O. K.

Punctuation, like law, is admittedly a mystery to the laity. Sometimes it is also a mystery to the press. Even editors and copy readers accustomed to traffic in commas find themselves a bit dazed by the potency attributed to the mystic punctuation mark in this case. Evidently commas—and the lack of them—have never been taken seriously enough.

"OLD IRONSIDES" AGAIN

It is nearly 100 years since a stirring poem by Oliver Wendell Holmes saved the famous warship Constitution from the scrap heap. Rather than subject her to ignominious junking, the poet urged that she be taken out to sea and there, in a setting reminiscent of her famous victories, given "to the god of storms, the lightning and the gale." His trumpet call brought her a less heroic fate.

She was restored, and restored again, for generations of Americans to gaze upon. But once more an evil fate comes upon her. "Old Ironsides" lies rotting in Boston harbor, neglected by the authorities of the country, state and city, and almost ignored by the public. Congress last winter authorized her rehabilitation, but provided no money.

Now the Elks propose to save her. They suggest raising $300,000 in small contributions from American school children. According to the plan suggested by the executive head of that order, a representative would visit every school room in the United States, tell the story of the Constitution and solicit funds, accepting nothing more than 10 cents from anyone.

It is a worthy cause. And it is hard to say which would be of more value—the preservation of the grand old ship or the patriotic effect of such a campaign on the nation's children.

THE SUNDAY SENTENCE

A Florida judge sentenced an intoxicated automobile driver to 10 days in jail. The offender had a family dependant on his support, so the judge decided to spread the sentence out over 10 consecutive Sundays. This means that for the next two months, at least, this particular reckless driver will be kept off the highways on Sundays, the days when the traffic is always heaviest.

Although this arrangement was made chiefly because of the family's need, it suggests possibilities which make it worth copying. Sunday is the big day for automobile accidents and killings. There could hardly be a more satisfying time to deprive numerous speed maniacs and intoxicated and reckless drivers of their cars. Why not try it more generally?

KNOW YOUR COUNTRY

"Have you seen Canada?" inquires the Dominion's Natural Resources Intelligence Service. Then it goes on to describe some of the things to be seen and enjoyed—thousands of miles of good highways, many lakes and rivers, canoe routes that lead into the hearts of noble forests, camping sites that appeal to the person who wants to get away from crowds.

The article then speaks of the thousands of tourists from other countries who explore Canada every summer and concludes:

"When outsiders can see so many things to interest them in Canada, why should Canadians not feel the spell of their own country's charms and see and admire them before going outside to do their motoring?"

It is, of course, Canada's version of our own "See America First." It is good to travel in foreign lands. It is just as good to travel at home. The United States offers its citizens an even greater variety of scene and climate. When opportunity comes to travel afar, it is well to do it. In the meantime, see your own county, see your own state, see your own section. This advice is always good.

"Know your own country, and be proud and thankful that you have been blessed with so wonderful a heritage."

Independent Colonies

Long Beach Press-Telegram.

Ties that really bind are stronger than political connections. "Blood is thicker than water," says an ancient adage, and mutual interest is more potent than either politics or blood.

Perhaps the Canadians and the Australians never consider the possibility that some day they will be independent of the mother land. The union is of standing too long and too strong to be lightly severed. Nevertheless, both Canada and Australia already have a large degree of independence. For one thing, Canada and Australia are permitted to maintain their own navies.

Reports tell of a desire for still further privileges, or perhaps a more accurate statement of the movement would be, for a larger measure of self-government. Inquiry has been directed to the Canadian parliament on the status of the governor general. Why should the Dominion any longer bear the expense of this position when the appointment is made by the British Crown? Australia has moved to reserve to itself the appointment of governors for the Federal states, or to require that they be citizens of that country. Now these appointments are made by the King.

These British colonies have their own monetary systems, they are permitted to levy duties, and to make treaties. Their sovereignty is quite complete. They elect their own legislative bodies, and have their own premiers. The governor general, usually a Briton of title, does not have large powers, but he represents the authority of the Empire.

Canada and Australia are developing rapidly into strong nations, perhaps not so strong that they can afford to relinquish their claims upon the British Government, nor to repudiate the claims which the British Government has upon them. The relationship is destined to continue indefinitely, but it must be granted that the science of government progresses even as does the science of every other branch of human endeavor.

Smith Swallowed Up

San Francisco Chronicle.

One lone Smith among 460 members of the graduating class of the College of the City of New York! What has happened to this celebrated family in New York, supposed to be the mainstay of the directory makers?

The graduating class swarms with Grozelskys and Angolnesi with Delratinis, Rabinovitchs and Aguinoldos, with Brizzalaris, Colons, Fratellas and Kwassers, but none of the ranks of such cognomens one singular and solitary Smith raises his laureate head.

Is it possible that this Smith was there by mistake?

For the homely old names of American tradition, of the pioneer, of the patriot are conspicuously absent from this graduating class. A newer and alien strain occupies the benches and is summoned for academic degrees.

In fact, so lonely does Smith appear among his new-found companions that the suspicion arises that he may have imitated the action of the motion picture actor who sloughed Samaneggs because it was commonly pronounced "salmon eggs."

It might appear that Smith was in danger of losing his identity in such a motley group, were we not familiar with the durability and persistency of the Smith tribe.

However, it is a healthy sign that the newer Americans recognize the cultural advantages of a university education and are availing themselves of the fine, free opportunity our colleges offer for this advancement. On our schools rests the hope of the nation to complete the welding of our strangely dissimilar units into a people in sympathy with the ideals of the founders, Americans all to the core.

Immortalized the Pioneers

Riverside Enterprise.

The newspapers of the United States are handing compliments to the late Herbert Quick who has recently passed on from his brilliant career as a fiction writer to the realm of the unknown.

He was to Iowa and the Middle West such a chronicler of its true life as was the late Emerson Hough, who wrote The Covered Wagon and immortalized the conquerors of the Far West.

Both Hough and Quick were all-round Americans, and sympathetic with the struggles of the pioneers who made this nation a reality.

Their stories are clean as the winds of the Iowa prairies, wholesome and invigorating as the lives they depict, leaving no excuse for reproducing degenerate literature for American families to read.

YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Clifford C. Robinson

FEAR AND HEALTH

Although the effects of fear are disastrous so far as the full attainment of our life's object may be concerned, its physical effects on body functioning are far greater.

In cases like personal contact with enemies, fear of animals, worry and excitement over financial situations or failure to govern the desire of revenge, the brain cells undergo a destructive change. Subjection to the inroads or stimulus of fear, whether temporary or prolonged, results in a distinct loss in brain power. Without unimpaired action of the brain to do your bidding in the direction of body work, loss in power to act and partial paralysis of real bodily health results.

Whether the brain is exhausted by work or fear, its restoration is a matter of rest and sleep, together with strong resistance. But fear continues its destructive inroads and unless arrested in time, will cause nervous and brain disarrangements of most serious consequences to your health.

This let-down in brain power seems to start other bodily losses. Fear causes heart impairment through overwork which results from jumps, strain and increased action when fear grips the body. A peculiar sensation of despair and prostration with a sinking feeling, sometimes accompanied by cold sweat, tremors and jerking muscles is produced. At such a time, all bodily functions which are of no direct assistance in the effort towards self-preservation are partially or totally suspended. In fact fear may so exhaust the organism that death may result.

Changes through fear are responsible for the hyperactivity of the thyroid and adrenal glands. Both are of utmost importance in governing body action. The thyroid controls to a great measure the wear and tear of the body or the process of metabolism. The adrenals produce a secretion which controls blood pressure through the nervous mechanism.

That Unbeatable Spirit

"THE CITY WILL REBUILD BIGGER AND BETTER THAN EVER"

MAJOR C. M. ANDERA
OF SANTA BARBARA

A Reply to Knockers

San Diego Union.

If good Americans eastward, seeking a lovelier clime, are deterred from coming to California because ten people were killed this year by earthquake in California, then they must logically do on being told that four times ten people are killed by automobiles every day, and more on Sunday, in America. Logically, they would not live in America at all, but seek African jungles or Arctic fields, and there never for a moment live in dread of existence shortened by gasoline.

Nature's toll of human life by violence is ridiculously small as compared to the toll taken by the devices that humanity itself conceals, whether for weal or for woe. And even benevolent Nature is especially benevolent to the dwellers in California as compared to other regions of the earth's surface. Ten on the death list caused by earthquake—on mortuary tables it is a negligible factor; and mortuary tables, mind you, are compiled by those whose business, that of life insurance, exists and pays dividends because of accurate estimates, based on facts and figures, of the expectancy of life of the insured. And does any company charge more for its policy because of residence in California? Eastern knockers in their propaganda against earthquakes as a knock against all California may answer that question, if they will be so kind—and fair.

We would point out to eastern friends, troubled by the knockers among them and by their natural reaction in all sympathy to the newspaper accounts of Santa Barbara's affliction, the sane and reassuring observations of the president of a large life insurance company specializing in Pacific Coast business, in this very region of imagined great danger from earthquake. He mentions that more than sixty-five thousand people are killed yearly in the United States from ordinary accidents, and then cites all the recorded history of California to verify the statement that less than a thousand have been killed by earthquakes in California in all the time since the American Declaration of Independence. How much less than a thousand he does not know exactly, for the early records are vague, but the actual number of such deaths is probably well under seven hundred. And at that, most of them were due to a single disaster, and the casualties in that case were so heavy because of structural conditions that have since been corrected.

That single disaster, we may also point out, did not happen in Southern California. And in Southern California, says our informant, there has been no casualty list because of earthquakes from 1812 until the Santa Barbara temblor of last Monday. There has been no death by earthquake in Southern California recorded during those 113 years.

"Actually," states this insurance man with the data all around him, "California with its health record, its death rate, its infant mortality rates, is one of the most secure, if not the most secure, place in the United States. There are instances, I believe, where elsewhere in the United States more people have been killed in a single flood or tornado than have been killed in California by quakes since the white man first came to these shores."

California asks only for the truth, and she hides nothing of the truth, even about her earthquakes.

Worth While Verse

HOME

There lies a little city in the hills;
White are its roofs, dim is each dwelling's door
And peace with perfect rest its bosom fills.

There the pure mist, the pity of the sea,
Comes as a white's soft hand, and reaches o'er
And touches its still face most tenderly.

Unstirred and calm, amid our shifting years,
Lo! where it lies, far from the clash and roar,
With quiet distance blurred, as if thru tears.

O heart that prayest so for God to send
Some loving messenger to go before
And lead the way to where thy longings end.

Be sure, be very sure, that soon will come
His kindest angel, and thru that still door
Into the Infinite love will lead thee home.

Time to Smile

ON THAT SLOW TRAIN

A man was riding on a train of a jerkwater railroad. In the presence of the conductor, he kept saying mean things about the train. Finally the conductor lost patience and yelled out, "Why don't you get off and walk?" "I would, but you see, the folks at my destination are not expecting me until the train arrives," said the passenger.—Atchison Globe.

THEORY AND FACT

"At last, my angel," said the happy man, after he had settled with the minister, "we are really and truly one—one forever." "Theoretically, yes," rejoined the modern bride, "but, from a practical standpoint, it will be advisable to have dinner for two."—Toronto Globe.

Little Benny's
Note Book

by Lee Pope

Mrs. Jardin came to see me this afternoon and they started to talk about different ways of reducing yourself thinner on account of them both being fatter than they wish they was, and ma sed, O well, anyhow, its no disgrace to be fat, some of the most prominent characters in history were good size people.

Certainly, look at the kings of England, Mrs. Jardin sed.

Personally I believe stout people are more intelligent, and their certainty more good natured, ma sed, and Mrs. Jardin sed, Yes, thats no secret, everybody knows that. Im proud of being mildly stout myself, she sed.

Thats a way I feel, ma sed. Whenever anybody accuses me of being stout I come right out openly and admit it, she sed.

That reminds me, I had to smile the other day, we were talking of stout people and being stout and somebody was rediculous enuff to tell me to my very face that I was as stout as you, Mrs. Jardin sed.

Well I assure you theres nothing rediculous about that in the least, you are quite as stout as I am if not stouter, ma sed. Not that that is eny disparagement in eny way shape or form, I am simply mentioning it in the interests of truth, I know many wimmin quite as stout as I am who consider they have ideal figures for their time of life, she sed.

Maybe so, but jest the same its absurd to say that I am as stout as you or even enyways neer, enybody with eyes in their head could see that was perpostorous, Mrs. Jardin sed, and ma sed, Well I have eyes in my head and if I was half blind I could see that you are a far bigger woman than I am and you properly couldnt get into eny of my clothes without inflicting axual torture on yourself, wy the idea, I never herd of such a thing.

They kepp on argueing about it and Mrs. Jardin went away mad and ma stayed home mad.

Proving they didnt think it was so wonderfull to be fat as wat they thawt they did.

THE MESSAGE.

Ah here's a happy little thought which I shall send a-wing-ing;

Across the waves of sun-warmed air, you'll hear its quiet singing.

The little breeze, the happy breeze that stirs among the grasses

And gathers fragrant memories from every flower it passes,

Paused just a moment at my lips and pressed against them lightly

And then went on its stinging way, because it reasoned rightly

Its pressure soft against my mouth (oh what a sweet thought this is!)

'Twould bear across the world to you—the sweetest of my kisses.

CHRONICLES OF THE LITTLE GRAY HOUSE

It was a gracious and kindly thing which we saw as we returned to the Little Gray House after a busy day at the office. It was just the peak of the afternoon traffic, and the blind singer who had been sitting in the sun at the corner all afternoon gathering in her few pennies was ready to go home.

She couldn't cross the crowded street at Fourth and Sycamore however, and as she paused and turned her sightless gaze first in one direction then another, the solution came. A woman, blonde, beautifully gowned, and carrying two heavy headed white roses on long, long stems, stepped swiftly up to her. "Take my arm and I'll help you cross," she said pleasantly.

I caught up with them when they paused to allow traffic to pass, and the good Samaritan was chatting in her pleasantly modulated voice, with no trace of patronage or "talking down" to her charge. Just chatting of the traffic and the people and the charm of a busy street exactly as she would have spoken to one of her friends and daily associates. And when she reached the other side, she courteously directed the blind singer on her further way before retracing her own steps to continue an errand interrupted by a bit of royal kindness.

Dear Patchwork Lady:

On one of our main highways there is a sign which says, "Police pups 1/2 mile." Is that information or just a warning? If the latter don't you think it a very discourteous way to refer to our handsome motor officers, and if it is sales information why not use the classified columns of The "Register" to say "Infant canines of the sluth variety for sale." Ambiguity causes more gray hairs than early piety.

A TALK ABOUT ANIMALS
By NEMO.

"Sally Lou," I said to that dusky damsel, "I wish you would get that clipping from the T h e Register that begins, 'Buster is only a dog.'"

I want to send it to 'Our Dumb Animals.' It is worthy of wider publication."

"Yassum," said Sally obediently. And presently, when she handed me the clipping, she said: "I wish dey was more animals roon' heah."

"What would we do with any more, Sally? The motor cars have about crowded them out of the earth."

"Yassum. But I wish 'em, an' de lan'lady's dorg, an' de neigbo's kids. Dats all dey is. Ain't you nevah made any po'try about animals?"

"Why yes, Sally. There's one in my book of 'Home-Spun Verse.' Please bring it to me."

"Caint I type it, fo' de Quilt?"

O lady fair
With eyes of brown
And hair of the self same hue,
I'd like to go to the party
To be given soon by you.
And your 'Fall Son' at the 'Little gray house'

On Riverine avenue,
I'm neither young nor handsome,
I'm old, and deaf and slow,
I do not care for parties,
But to your's I'd like to go.
Why the very thought of going
Just puts me in a quiver,
I'll "speak a piece" or bring a cake,
And contribute towards the
"flyer."

I sent you once a little "patch"
It was a simple thing,
It told about the pretty hymns
"My mother used to sing";
I'll send again a little rhyme,
Do with it what you please,
If fit for a "patch" please use it.
Yours truly
"ONE OF THE BLESSES."

OF THE TWINS
Olive Roberts Barton

NO. 9—THROUGH THE PEBBLE WALL

The Twins tried to move but couldn't. The tiny pebbles on the pebble wall had come rolling down about them until the children were almost buried up to their ears.

To make matters worse, the Bean-Shooter-Man, to whom the wall belonged, came along and read them a lecture on manners, which they didn't like at all.

But finally he rolled up his lecture and put it into his pocket. "There!" said he. "Two much is plenty. Now tell me about yourselves—where you came from and where you are here for. And also how you happened to knock down half my pebble wall without my permission."

"I'm sorry," said Nick. "But we came from home and we aren't going any place unless we can get out of this stone-pile."

The Bean-Shooter-Man looked at him sharply. "Are you poking fun at me?" he demanded. "I hope not. That's the worst manner of all. I'll have to add that to my lecture when I write it over. Now begin all over again."

"We're hunting for Pixie Cave," said Nick. "The Golden stole the Fairy Queen's golden beehive, and she hasn't any honey. Nancy and I are looking for it. We have the key we got there, and we have magic shoes, too, that—"

"What!" cried the Bean-Shooter-Man in surprise. "Have you magic shoes? Then why don't you wish yourselves out of this?"

"We forgot," exclaimed Nancy. So she said: "Shoes be nimble, shoes be quick. Or here we Twins shall have to stick."

Take us over the pebble-wall, to shoot at a mark with my long bean shooter. But first I'll blow you out of that."

So he took his long bean shooter and blew and instantly all the pebbles around the Twins blew away and they were free.

"See the daisies in yonder field?" said the Bean-Shooter-Man to Nick. "Well, take my shooter and blow off the tenth petal on the daisy that stands exactly in the middle of the field."

Nick put some tiny pebbles in to his mouth and blew.

"Good!" cried the Bean-Shooter-Man. "It's off." Then to Nancy. "See the star over yonder tree? No? Well, it's there just the same. Blow a hole through the middle."

Nancy took the long pipe and blew.

"Good!" cried the Bean-Shooter-Man. "Right on the bull's-eye! Steady nerves you have, my dears! Now I shall blow my pebble wall in two and you may pass."

So he took the blower and blew long and hard. The pebbles divided, leaving a clear path through which the Twins walked. (To be continued.)
